Griffin,1996-01-01 The Mentally Impaired Elderly Ellen D. Taira,1991 Provide effective support and sensitive care for the most vulnerable segment of the elderly population those with mental impairment with the helpful methods and practical strategies outlined in this invaluable new book Because of the increasing number of older persons with memory impairments mental health problems and Alzheimer s disease it is clear that interventions to delay the loss of function in mentally impaired older adults are desperately needed The Mentally Impaired Elderly offers optimistic guidelines for caregivers of the mentally impaired elderly and demonstrates through the use of theoretical models research and clinical evidence that persons with dementia can participate in activities and family life longer than previously thought Interventions are demonstrated for maintaining the function level of the mentally impaired elderly by focusing on controlling the environment to increase the patients self care ability resulting in lower care costs and an improved level of mental health for the patient Beginning with the description of a theoretical model this helpful volume provides a framework on which to base work with the mentally impaired elderly and to offer hope and encouragement to those involved with the task of caring for older persons Important research is emphasized including the role of temporal adaptation in self care the relationship between apraxia and dressing skills and a positive view of efforts to enrich the daily lives of institutional residents using program enhancement Those who care for mentally impaired elderly adults in the home as well as gerontologists occupational therapists physical therapists nurses social workers psychologists and therapeutic recreation specialists will greatly benefit from the helpful strategies outlined in this volume Protocols for Adapting Activities to the Changing Needs of People with Dementia Ruth McCrum Griffin,1996 Perspectives on Purposeful Activity Rita P. Fleming Cottrell,1996 Samling af artikler fra AJOT American Journal of Occupational Therapy Designing and Delivering Dementia Services Hugo de Waal,Constantine Lyketsos,David Ames,John O'Brien,2013-05-03 Dementia is increasingly and widely recognised as a serious health and social challenge in the developed world as well as in the developing world The need therefore to design and implement dementia care services of high quality is becoming more and more vital particularly given the likelihood of ever increasing demand in a world which likely sees resources at best remaining at current levels Designing and Delivering Dementia Services describes current developments in the design and configuration of dementia services It offers an informative and detailed overview of what constitutes high quality care considering the circumstances patients and carers may find themselves in For dementia to get the priority it deserves a number of factors are important and the book charts the invaluable contributions of various Alzheimer s Associations and Societies this provides a focus on dementia strategies and plans at national levels the book reports on the state of affairs regarding such strategies and provides a unique insight into the process of how one of these was developed and implemented Recognising the need to prove that service developments

lead to a higher quality of care increased productivity and increased efficiency the book links the resulting picture to service based research methodologies with an emphasis on the strengths and limitations of that research Contributions from 17 countries on 4 continents give an overview of the state of affairs across the world paying attention to successful and less successful initiatives to improve dementia care The book furthermore provides pragmatic approaches to ensure planning becomes reality highlights the need for structured workforce development education and training and describes the opportunities afforded by assistive technology This book is of prime informative and practical value given that pressures on dementia services are projected to mount across the world against a backdrop of limited resources and expertise Designing and Delivering Dementia Services Defines the problems involved in meeting an increasing demand for dementia care services in a poorer world Maps initiatives and developments in the design and configuration of these services in a variety of international settings Analyses these developments against the background of political and health economic circumstances Provides a road map of where health services should go in response to this growing challenge The first book to define analyse and map initiatives for dementia care services in a time of increasing demand and decreasing resources this book is essential reading for commissioners senior clinicians and service planners in health and social care It will also be of interest to academic researchers involved in qualitative services research as well as quantitative health economic research health and social care managers and those involved in workforce planning and development
