Aims and method The new 2021 UK Foundation Programme Curriculum mandates foundation doctors to acquire mental health competencies. This study aimed to evaluate the effectiveness of psychiatry placements in facilitating competency attainment, foundation doctors' perceived importance of acquiring these and their preferred teaching methods. Utilising Kirkpatrick's evaluation framework, the study employed a pre-post intervention design assessing the impact of psychiatry placements on 135 foundation doctors across three cohorts from August 2021 to March 2022.

Results Initially, foundation doctors assigned high importance to mental health competencies. Post-placements, this perceived importance improved slightly, whereas that of clinical skills scenarios slightly decreased. Significant confidence increases were observed in recognising and assessing specific psychiatric disorders. Foundation doctors favoured small seminar groups and on-the-job ad hoc teaching. Qualitative insights underscored the need for context-specific teaching.

Clinical implications Psychiatry placements enhance foundation doctors' confidence and perceived importance of mental health competencies as specified by the curriculum. Addressing clinical scenario gaps through context-specific teaching and transferable skills development is essential. Customised teaching approaches, especially small seminars and ad hoc teaching, hold promise for effective mental health training.

Keywords Postgraduate medical education; foundation doctors; curriculum; competency; psychiatric placement.

The UK Foundation Programme, established in 2005, is a 2-year postgraduate training programme for newly qualified doctors that provides a comprehensive framework for the development of clinical and professional competency through a series of 4-month-long placements.<sup>1</sup> Historically, foundation doctors were placed predominantly in acute trusts across a wide range of medical and surgical specialties; however, owing to the evolving medical education landscape and recognition of the importance of mental health competencies, the Foundation Programme was broadened to include optional psychiatry placements, with approximately 45% of all foundation doctors being expected to be placed in psychiatry.<sup>2</sup> Mental health competencies were not made compulsory at that time.

More recently, mental illness has been recognised as one of the top ten leading causes of burden worldwide, with overwhelming pressure on healthcare providers to meet population needs.<sup>3</sup> Improving training in psychiatry competencies for healthcare professionals in various settings is necessary to manage the impact of this 'mental health pandemic'. Consequently, Health Education England updated the UK Foundation Programme Curriculum (UKFPC) in 2021,<sup>4</sup> mandating the acquisition of mental health knowledge and skills under areas of core learning (Box 1).

How do foundation doctors perceive the importance of acquiring psychiatric skills at this training stage, and can participation in psychiatry placements change their perception? Furthermore, to what extent are psychiatry placements equipped to effectively deliver the new curriculum? Is there a preferred way to deliver psychiatric clinical teaching according to foundation doctors' preferences? This study aims to answer these questions by providing insights from the Maudsley Training Programme in South London. To the best of our knowledge, this study is the first to address these questions and specifically evaluate the effectiveness encountered in the implementation of community mental health care worldwide and presents guidelines on how to avoid them. It proposes realistic and achievable recommendations for the development and implementation of community orientated mental health care over the next ten years. These guidelines will be of practical use to psychiatrists and other mental health and public health practitioners at all levels worldwide including policy makers, commissioners, funders, non-governmental organisations, service users and carers. A core message of the book is that the mental health sector will more powerfully advocate for better services in future through strong and unified alliances, especially with powerful representation from consumer, service user and carer groups. Community orientated care draws on a wide range of practitioners, providers, care and support systems, both professional and non-professional, though particular components may play a larger or lesser role in different settings depending on the local context and the available resources, especially trained staff. Research by a WPA task force has demonstrated that most of the challenges are common and global but with local variations. The book is therefore relevant to psychiatrists and mental health workers in developed countries who are trying to deliver better health care on reduced budgets and for those in the developing economies who are in the position to modernise their mental health care. It provides clear, concise guidance on policy and practice decisions, learning from what has and has not worked in regions in the world. The book contains many tables documenting the evidence, supported by an essential reference list and a Key Points summary for each chapter. Highly Commended in the Psychiatry section of the 2012 BMA Book Awards. A companion to criminal justice, mental health and risk Taylor, Paul, Corteen, Karen, Morley, Sharon, 2014-10-22. Within the domains of criminal justice and mental health care, a critical debate concerning care versus control and therapy versus security is now commonplace. Indeed, the hybridisation of these areas is now a familiar theme. This unique and topical text provides an array of expert analyses from key contributors in the field that explore the interface between criminal justice and mental health. Using concise yet robust definitions of key terms and concepts, it consolidates scholarly analysis of theory, policy and practice. Readers are provided with practical debates in addition to the theoretical and ideological concerns surrounding the risk assessment, treatment, control and risk management in a cross-disciplinary context. Included in this book is recommended further reading and an index of legislation, making it an ideal resource for students at undergraduate and postgraduate level, together with researchers and practitioners in the field. Emerging Trends in Mental Health Care for Adolescents United States. Congress. House. Select Committee on Children, Youth, and Families, 1985. Psychological Evaluations for the Courts Gary B. Melton, John Petrila, Norman G. Poythress, Christopher Slobogin, Randy K. Otto, Douglas Mossman, Lois O. Condie, 2017-12-04. Tens of thousands of readers have relied on this leading text and practitioner reference, now revised and updated to understand the issues the legal system most commonly asks mental health professionals to address. The volume demystifies the forensic psychological assessment process and provides guidelines for participating effectively and ethically in legal proceedings. Presented are clinical and legal concepts and evidence-based assessment.

Community Mental Health Graham Thornicroft, Atalay Alem, Robert E. Drake, Hiroto Ito, Jair Mari, Peter McGeorge, R. Tara, Maya Semrau, 2011-09-09 There are wide inconsistencies between and even within countries in how community orientated care is defined and interpreted The analysis presented in this book take as a starting point an evidence based balanced care model in which services are provided in community settings close to the populations served with hospital stays being reduced as far as possible usually located in acute wards in general hospitals The surprising conclusion from the research is that the same problems arise in all countries regardless of resource status and thus the recommendations of this book apply to mental health provision everywhere This book reviews the implementation of community orientated care using the balanced care model It summarizes the steps obstacles and mistakes that have been
