Readings in Writing Courses Richard C. Raymond, 2010-12-01 As the title suggests this six chapter book responds to a question which in Western culture goes back to Plato Aristotle Cicero and Quintilian namely What should rhetoric teachers ask their students to read Primarily historical the first two chapters trace conflicting answers to the question above focusing on two constructive results of the debate the re invention of rhetoric and writing as a discipline a coherent and growing body of knowledge and as a result the emergence of independent departments of writing free from departments of English free therefore to develop their own curriculum and to manage their own budgets Additionally the second chapter examines two destructive consequences of this debate the ban of literature from writing courses where students might profitably study both and as a result the often painful departmental splits which not only separate former colleagues but also cramp the pedagogy of those trained to teach both writing and literature More than a survey of key publications this chapter encourages readers to honor the discipline of rhetoric but to make a place for literature on their composition syllabi The next four chapters provide pedagogical support for these chief claims that literature can and should be taught in writing courses and that such readings need not distract students from the primary text their own writing On the contrary these readings motivate serious writing when students feel invited into a conversation on issues that touch their lives These pedagogical chapters then move entering professionals from the theoretical debate to the application of theory therefore the book would serve well professors of courses in composition theory particularly those who enjoy teaching the conflicts and preparing their graduate students to design assignments and courses that apply theories of learning reading and composing Critical

Thinking, Thoughtful Writing John Chaffee,Christine McMahon,Barbara Stout,2005 Written by leading educators in interdisciplinary critical thinking this popular rhetoric with readings makes a direct link between learning to write and read effectively and developing critical thinking skills Each chapter focuses on a particular critical thinking skill such as problem solving or analyzing complex issues which is practiced and explored through Thinking Writing Activities and thematically linked readings Students further develop these skills through carefully sequenced pedagogy that promotes writing and a cross disciplinary approach that asks them to critically evaluate a variety of readings Research Techniques for Computer
