Neuropathology Colin L. Berry, 2012-12-06 Increasing specialisation in pathology reflects the progressive changes in medical practise The advent of a specialist with a new interest in a hospital or clinic may present the pathologist with a need to extend his or her knowledge to be able to work closely with the clinical practitioner in order to provide adequate clinical care Some sub specialisations are long established such a one is neuropathology However an exclusive specialist practise is generally confined to neurosurgical centres and much neuropathology is of necessity executed by general pathologists The areas covered by this volume are those which are commonly managed by the generalist Professor Adams account of how the skull and brain should be examined here will give confidence to many by defining a good technique and the careful description of various kinds of vascular injury lesions resulting from raised intracranial pressure will help to clarify repeated difficulty More subtle forms of damage are also considered in detail Professor Weller provides a detailed account of how the central nervous system may be examined in a way which permits all of us to prepare material which will allow adequate investigation of central nervous system disease and the proper examination of peripheral nerves This chapter will become a handbook and will be of interest to those in training and established practitioners Muscle biopsy is also dealt with this is an area of investigative concern for many generalists The role of that singular neuropathological technique is very clearly emphasized
