The Paths of Inland Commerce Archer Butler Hulbert,2020-04-18 Inland America at the birth of the Republic was as great a mystery to the average dweller on the Atlantic seaboard as the elephant was to the blind men of Hindustan The reports of those who had penetrated this wilderness of those who had seen the barren ranges of the Alleghanies the fertile uplands of the Unakas the luxuriant blue grass regions the rich bottom lands of the Ohio and Mississippi the wide shores of the inland seas or the stretches of prairie increasing in width beyond the Wabash seemed strangely contradictory and no one had been able to patch these reports together and grasp the real proportions of the giant inland empire that had become a part of the United States It was a pathless desert it was a maze 2 of trails trodden out by deer buffalo and Indian Its great riverways were broad avenues for voyagers and explorers they were treacherous gorges filled with the plunder of a million floods It was a rich soil a land of plenty the natives were seldom more than a day removed from starvation Within its broad confines could dwell a great people but it was as inaccessible as the interior of China It had a great commercial future yet its gigantic distances and natural obstructions defied all known means of transportation

The Paths of Inland Commerce Archer B Hulbert,2020-03 In their wanderings man and beast alike sought the heights the passes that pierced the mountain chains and the headwaters of navigable rivers On the ridges the forest growth was lightest and there was little obstruction from fallen timber rain and frost caused least damage by erosion and the winds swept the trails clear of leaves in summer and of snow in winter Here lay the easiest paths for the heavy blundering buffalo and the roving elk and moose and deer Here high up in the sun where the outlook was unobstructed and signal fires could be seen from every direction on the longest watersheds curving around river and swamp ran the earliest travel routes of the aboriginal inhabitants and of their successors the red men of historic times For their encampments and towns these peoples seem to have preferred the more sheltered ground along the smaller streams but when they fared abroad to hunt to trade to wage war to seek new material for pipe and amulet they followed in the main the highest ways The Paths of Inland Commerce Archer B.
