

Relational Epistemologies for a Living Planet

How do we go about arriving at “truths”, together? Not “timeless” truths, but useful truths, situated ones, something that helps this group, this organization, this community, find its own way forward? As a practitioner of group facilitation, I have developed certain practical knowledge about this; as a theorist and researcher-in-training, I have begun to explore long-standing questions about how our conventional cognitive habits might create difficulties for this work. In this essay, I will be exploring a variety of academic theorists who question our ingrained cultural assumptions about argumentation, while also pointing to some useful alternatives.

Forty years ago, in Metaphors We Live By, cognitive linguist George Lakoff and philosopher Mark Johnson invited us to become more conscious of our cultural patterns by observing how arguments, one aspect of our society’s search for truth, are organized through the metaphor of “war” (he “attacked” my position, she “defended” her thesis):

ARGUMENT is partially structured, understood, performed, and talked about in terms of WAR. [...] The language of argument is not poetic, fanciful, or rhetorical; it is literal. We talk about arguments that way because we conceive of them that way – and we act according to the way we conceive things. (1980, p. 5)<sup>1</sup>

Lakoff and Johnson point out that even “rational argument”, the specialized subset of argument that prevails in the worlds of academia, law, and diplomacy, is still structured by war. Ostensibly restricted to stating premises, citing evidence, and drawing logical conclusions, “there is still a position to be established and defended, you can win or lose, you have an opponent whose position you attack and destroy and whose argument you try to shoot down” (p. 64). Their examples show how there is often present, in a subtle form, “the ‘irrational’ and ‘unfair’ tactics that rational arguments in their ideal form are supposed to transcend” (p. 65).

On the whole, academic culture as a whole still lacks a coherent alternative to the culture of argumentation. Here is the experience of AnaLouise Keating, multicultural women’s and gender studies professor: <sup>1</sup> Lakoff and Johnson’s work on the metaphorical foundations of language was part of their invitation to move beyond the “myth of objectivism” and the “myth of subjectivism” to “the experientialist alternative” where “understanding emerges from interaction” (1980, p. 230).

Feminist Theory and International Law Emily Jones, 2023-01-31 Feminist approaches to international law have been mischaracterised by the mainstream of the discipline as being a niche field that pertains only to women s lived experiences and their participation in decision making processes Exemplifying how feminist approaches can be used to analyse all areas of international law this book applies posthuman feminist theory to examine the regulation of new and emerging military technologies international environmental law and the conceptualisation of the sovereign state and other modes of legal personality in international law Noting that most posthuman scholarship to date is primarily theoretical this book also contributes to the field of posthumanism through its application of posthuman feminism to international law working to bridge the theory and practice divide by using posthuman feminism to design and call for legal change This interdisciplinary book draws on an array of fields including philosophy queer and feminist theories postcolonial and critical race theories computer science critical disability studies science and technology studies marine biology cultural and media studies Indigenous onto epistemologies critical legal theory political science and beyond to provide a holistic analysis of international law and its inclusions and exclusions This interdisciplinary book will appeal to students and scholars with interests in legal feminist and posthuman theory as well as those concerned with the contemporary challenges faced by international law

Relational "(e)pistemologies" Barbara J. Thayer-Bacon, 2003 Relational e pistemologies redefines epistemology in a non transcendent manner and reclaims the traditional epistemological concerns of standards and criteria for warranting arguments and determining truth and falsity These concerns must be reclaimed in order to make them visible and accountable as well as pragmatically useful on socially constructed grounds not transcendental grounds Thayer Bacon s book offers analysis and critique as well as redescription She presents a pragmatist social feminist view a relational perspective of knowing embedded within a discussion of many other relational views personal social and holistic ecological and scientific which emphasize connections Thayer Bacon describes each of these forms of relationality and she points to key scholars whose work highlights a certain relational form She concludes with a discussion of the educational implications relational e pistemological theories have for education Opening Windows Kate Sherren, Gladman Thondhlana, Douglas outcomes Opening Windows is significant for scholars students natural resource practitioners managers and decision makers and policy makers Theory and Practice of Dialogical Community Development Peter Westoby, Gerard Dowling, 2013-07-18 This book proposes that community development has been increasingly influenced and co opted by a modernist soulless rational philosophy reducing it to a shallow technique for solving community problems In contrast this dialogical approach re maps the ground of community development practice within a frame of ideas such as dialogue hospitality and depth For the first time community development practitioners are provided with an accessible understanding of dialogue and its relevance to their practice exploring the contributions of internationally significant thinkers such as P Freire M Buber D Bohm and H G Gadamer J Derrida G Esteva and R Sennett What makes the book distinctive is that first it identifies a dialogical tradition of community development and considers how such a tradition shapes practice within contemporary contexts and concerns economic social political cultural and ecological Second the book contrasts such an approach with technical and instrumental approaches to development that fail to take complex systems seriously Third the approach links theory to practice through a combination of storytelling and theory reflection ensuring that readers are drawn into a practice theory that they feel increasingly confident has been tried and tested in the world over the past 25 years
