

The background of the book cover is a detailed, multi-colored illustration. It depicts a scene of historical significance, likely the Columbian Exchange. In the foreground, a Native American man in a feathered headdress and a red tunic is shown in a dynamic pose, holding a long staff or spear. He is surrounded by other figures, including a man in a brown tunic and a woman in a red dress. In the background, there are large, ornate buildings with classical architectural features like columns and arches. The overall style is reminiscent of a historical painting or a detailed woodcut.

are the considerations according to which Biblical retranslations are being produced in current 21st century contexts From retranslations of the Hebrew Bible to those of the Old and New Testaments to mutual influences of Christian and Jewish translational traditions the papers collected here all deal with the question of what is to be re gained with the production of a new translation where at times many a previous one has already existed Volume 2 Times are changing and with them the norms and notions of correctness Despite a wide spread belief that the Bible as a sacred original only allows one translation if any new translations are constantly produced and published for all kinds of audiences and purposes The various paradigms marked by the theological political and historical correctness of the time group and identity and bound to certain ethics and axiomatic norms are reflected in almost every current translation project Like its predecessor the current volume brings together scholars working at the intersection of Translation Studies Bible Studies and Theology all of which share a special point of interest concerning the status of the Scriptures as texts fundamentally based on the act of translation and its recurring character It aims to breathe new life into Bible translation studies unlock new perspectives and vistas of the field and present a bigger picture of how Bible re translation works in society today Trading Life Seán Columb,2020-07-21
