The Review is interested in the tension at the heart of matters of reason and faith, rationalism and mysticism, theory and practice, narrativity and normativity, doubt and dogma.

A Poisoned Past Steven Bednarski, 2014-04-29
This is the story of Margarida de Portu, a fourteenth-century French medieval woman accused of poisoning her husband to death. As Bednarski points out, the story is important not so much for what it tells us about Margarida but for how it illuminates a past world. Through the depositions and accusations made in court, the reader learns much about medieval women, female agency, kin networks, solidarity, sex, sickness, medicine and law. Unlike most histories, this book does not remove the author from the analysis. Rather, it lays bare the working methods of the historian. Throughout his tale, Bednarski skillfully weaves a second narrative about how historians do history, highlighting the rewards and pitfalls of working with primary sources. The book opens with a chapter on microhistory as a genre and explains its strengths, weaknesses and inherent risks. Next is a narrative of Margarida's criminal trial, followed by chapters on the civil suits and appeal and Margarida's eventual fate. The book features a rough copy of a court notary's act and a sample of a criminal inquest record in the original Latin. A timeline of Margarida's life, list of characters and two family trees provide useful information on key people in the story. A map of late medieval Manosque is also provided.

History of France J. Michelet, Santé et société à Montpellier à la fin du Moyen Âge Geneviève Dumas, 2014-11-27
This book examines the social, institutional and cultural setting of medical practices in the medieval town of Montpellier, which boasted one of the first universities of the middle ages and a famous school of medicine. Some of its most celebrated masters and their medical works have been thoroughly studied, but few of them try to put these in context with a thriving urban community of merchants and craftsmen that were at the core of the city council Their concurrent efforts will endow Montpellier of a rich health care system featuring not only the university masters but also the city s barber surgeons and apothecaries Their collective fate is revealed here in an integrated picture of health and society in the middle ages
