Neuroscience in Education Sergio Della Sala, Mike Anderson, 2012-04-05 In the past ten years there has been growing interest in applying our knowledge of the human brain to the field of education including reading learning language and mathematics This has resulted in the development of a number of new practices in education some good some bad and some just crazy Hence we have had theories suggesting that listening to Mozart can boost intelligence foot massages can help unruly pupils fish oil can boost brain power even the idea that breathing through your left nostril can enhance creativity Sadly there is a gap between what neuroscientists or cognitive psychologists know about brain mind functions and the supposedly scientific theory underlying the practices used daily in our schools So what has caused this wholesale embrace of neuroscience in the classroom a well intentioned but naive misunderstanding of how science works ideological reasons or financial incentives Neuroscience in Education brings together an international group of leading psychologists neuroscientists and geneticists to critically review some of these new developments examining the science behind these practices the validity of the theories on which they are based and whether they work It will be fascinating reading for anyone involved in education including psychologists teachers and policy makers

Language, Memory, and Cognition in Infancy and Early Childhood Janette B. Benson, Marshall M. Haith, 2010-05-22 Language cognition and memory are traditionally studied together prior to a researcher specializing in any one area They are studied together initially because much of the development of one can affect the development of the others Most books available now either tend to be extremely broad in the areas of all infant development including physical and social development or specialize in cognitive development language acquisition or memory Rarely do you find all three together despite the fact that they all relate to each other This volume consists of focused articles from the authoritative Encyclopedia of Infant and Early Childhood Development and specifically targets the ages 0 3 Providing summary overviews of basic and cutting edge research coverage includes attention assessment bilingualism categorization skills critical periods learning disabilities reasoning speech development etc This collection of articles provides an essential affordable reference for researchers graduate students and clinicians interested in cognitive development language development and memory as well as those developmental psychologists interested in all aspects of development Focused content on age 0 3 saves time searching for and wading through lit on full age range for developmentally relevant info Concise understandable and authoritative easier to comprehend for immediate applicability in research National Library of Medicine Current Catalog
