The Victorian Art School Ranald Lawrence, 2020-09-02 The Victorian Art School documents the history of the art school in the nineteenth century from its origins in South Kensington to its proliferation through the major industrial centres of Britain Charles Rennie Mackintosh's Glasgow School of Art together with earlier examples in Manchester and Birmingham demonstrate an unprecedented concern for the provision of plentiful light and air amidst the pollution of the Victorian city As theories of design education and local governance converged they also reveal the struggle of the provincial city for cultural independence from the capital Examining innovations in the use of new technologies and approaches in the design of these buildings The Victorian Art School offers a unique and explicitly environmental reading of the Victorian city It examines how art schools complemented civic Improvement programmes their contribution to the evolution of art pedagogy the tensions that arose between the provincial schools and the capital and the role they would play in reimagining the relationship between art and public life in a rapidly transforming society The architects of these buildings synthesised the potential of art with the perfection of the internal environment indelibly shaping the future cultural life of Britain

History and Precedent in Environmental Design Anatol Rapoport, 2013-06-29 This book is about a new and different way of approaching and studying the history of the built environment and the use of historical precedents in design However although what I am proposing is new for what is currently called architectural history both my approach and even my conclusions are not that new in other fields as I discovered when I attempted to find supporting evidence. In fact, of all the disciplines dealing with various aspects of the study of the past, architectural history seems to have changed least in the ways I am advocating. There is currently a revival of interest in the history of architecture and urban form; a similar interest applies to theory, vernacular design and culture-environment relations. After years of neglect, the study of history and the use of historical precedent are again becoming important. However, that interest has not led to new approaches to the subject nor have its bases been examined. This I try to do. In so doing, I discuss a more rigorous and I would argue a more valid way of looking at historical data and hence of using such data in a theory of the built environment and as precedent in environmental design. Underlying this is my view of Environment Behavior Studies (EBS) as an emerging theory rather than as data to help design based on current theory. Although this will be the subject of another book, a summary statement of this position may be useful.

Rethinking Public Space Ali Madanipour, 2023-01-17 Taking a critical perspective, this book rethinks public space in the context of contemporary global health and economic crises as well as technological, political and cultural change. In order to do so, Ali Madanipour brings together two often unrelated discourses: public space and social inclusion, interrogating the potential for public spaces to contribute to inclusive social practices.

Race Denise Eileen McCoskey, 2021-03-25 How do different cultures think about race? In the modern era, racial distinctiveness has been assessed primarily in terms of a person's physical appearance. But it was not always so. As Denise McCoskey shows, the ancient Greeks and Romans did not use skin colour as the basis for categorising ethnic disparity. The colour of one's skin lies at the foundation of racial variability today because it was used during the heyday of European exploration and colonialism to construct a hierarchy of civilizations and then justify slavery and other forms of economic exploitation. Assumptions about race thus have to take into account factors other than mere physiognomy. This is particularly true in relation to the classical world. In fifth-century Athens, racial theory during the Persian Wars produced the categories Greek and Barbarian and set them in brutal opposition to one another, a process that could be as intense and destructive as black and white in our own age. Ideas about race in antiquity were therefore completely distinct but as closely bound to political and historical contexts as those that came later. This provocative book boldly explores the complex matrices of race and the differing interpretations of ancient and modern across epic tragedy and the novel. Ranging from Theocritus to Toni Morrison and from Tacitus and Pliny to Bernal's seminal study Black Athena, this is a powerful and original new assessment.

Carne y piedra Richard Sennett, 2019-04-18 Carne y piedra es una historia de la ciudad en la civilización occidental contada a través de la experiencia corporal de las personas. Apoyándose en un enfoque multidisciplinar y en su vasta erudición, Richard Sennett describe aspectos íntimos de la vida como se movían hombres y mujeres que veían y oían donde como cuando se bañaban como hacían el amor en el espacio urbano de ciudades emblemáticas a lo largo de la historia. De la desnudez en la antigua Atenas a la falta de contacto con los otros en la Nueva York contemporánea.
