seldom seen Liberalism versus Postliberalism provides such analyses using the developments in analytic philosophy of language over the past forty years The book provides an original reading of the theology and falsification debates of the 1950s and 60s and Knight's interpretation of the debates supplies a philosophical lens that brings into focus the centrality of religious language in the methodological dispute between liberal and postliberal theologians Knight suggests that recent philosophical developments reveal problems with both positions and argues for a more inclusive method that takes seriously the aspirations of the debaters His book makes an important contribution to contemporary theological method to the understanding of liberal and postliberal theologies and to our understanding of the role of analytic philosophy in contemporary theology and religious studies Theological Reflections Elaine Graham, 2013-01-08 Following the same topics as the Methods volume this reader is aimed at postgraduates and academics interested in the expanding volume of work and research surrounding theological reflection Brought together in this second volume are materials relating to the same topics and dealt with by the same divisions descriptions and features The identified models being The Living Human Document Constructive Narrative Theology Canonical Narrative Theology Corporate Theological Reflection The Correlative Method Performative or Praxis Theological Reflection and Theology in the Vernacular or local theologies Volume one described and identified the various models whilst this new second volume fleshes out these descriptions by allowing the reader access to a variety of sources and examples of writings within these models Silk and Steel Kat

Development James Calderhead,Peter Gates,2003-09-02 Reflection has become widely recognised as a crucial element in the professional growth of teachers Terms such as reflective teaching enquiry orientated teacher education teachers as researchers and reflective practitioner have become quite prolific in discussions of classroom practice and professional development It is frequently presumed that reflection is an intrinsically good and desirable aspect of teaching and teacher education and that teachers in becoming more reflective will in some sense be better teachers though such claims have been rarely subject to detailed scrutiny Each of the chapters in this book is concerned with exploring the concept of reflection and considering its contributions to teacher education The papers range across different stages of professional development some focusing in particular on pre service education others on in service or professional development generally Some of the papers are concerned with particular strategies for promoting reflection and how they might operate in a teacher education context others dwell more upon a theoretical appreciation of how reflection facilitates in the processes of professional development and how it relates to issues of quality in teacher education
