Principles Of Olfactory Maturation In Vertebrates:

Ontogeny of Olfaction Raimund Apfelbach, Winrich Breipohl, 2012-12-06 The impacts of specifically experienced external and internal environments upon phylogenetically established pathways of ontogenetic development seem to be responsible for the intra species variation of organisms. Therefore normal function as well as disorders of sensory systems can often be better understood by considering the principles of ontogenetic maturation and the time schedule of environmental influences during that period. Sensory organs and systems have long been considered to be hereditarily determined for their analysis of the environment. However it is becoming more and more clear that their specificity depends also upon the sequence and nature of environmental impacts during highly sensitive periods of postnatal life being most effective. The present book using an interdisciplinary approach has brought together various descriptions of developmental processes for one of the phylogenetically oldest sensory analytical circuits the olfactory system. Although investigations of a wide range of vertebrates are included from marsupials to man the main attention was given to rodents the most frequently used experimental animal in this field of research. Authors have been asked for reviews and original considerations on the rationales of developmental principles in the olfactory system and wherever appropriate to highlight its uniqueness or similarities with other parts of the nervous system. Authors were also asked to consider future needs of research in their fields to describe their own approaches in this context and to outline general horizons of neurodevelopmental research. Chemoreception Abstracts, 1988 National Library of Medicine Current Catalog

National Library of Medicine (U.S.), The Developing Marsupial C.H. Tyndale-Biscoe, P.A. Janssens, 2012-12-06 Marsupials are excellent objects for studies on developmental processes in all mammals including humans. Marsupials are very immature at birth and undergo most of their development in a pouch where they can be manipulated in a variety of ways without affecting the mother. Most of these studies are on systems which largely mature before birth in eutherian mammals and are consequently difficult to investigate. Attention is also drawn to certain features peculiar to adult marsupials e.g. they continue to grow throughout adult life valuable for studies on growth mechanisms and furthermore the composition of marsupial milk changes radically through lactation most important in studies of hormonal regulation of milk composition and secretion.

Current Catalog National Library of Medicine (U.S.), First multi year cumulation covers six years 1965-70 Tasting and Smelling Gary K. Beauchamp, Linda Bartoshuk, 1997-09-05 Tasting and Smelling presents a comprehensive overview to research on these two important modes of perception. The book offers a review of research findings on the biophysics, neurophysiology and psychophysics of both senses as well as discussing the emotional component associated with taste and smell and clinical disorders affecting each of these two senses. Tasting and Smelling answers how odors and flavors are perceived why we have favorites and what happens when our senses go awry. This book is of interest to the researcher in perception, cognition or neurophysiology. Infancy Lisa M. Oakes, Vanessa Lobue, Marianella Casasola, 2023-09-08 Lisa M

Oakes Vanessa Lobue and Marianella Casasola's Infancy The Development of the Whole Child unites historically important and cutting edge theories and research to illustrate the development of the whole child from birth to age three. Topically organized and written in a conversational tone, the text illustrates the interconnected nature of development through links within its bio psycho social coverage. Through its inclusive approach, students see individual similarities and differences in development as a function of factors such as culture, language, experience, parenting style, and socioeconomic status. Stories from the authors' own experiences with infants highlight connections between research and parenting, social policy, and everyday contexts, effectively bringing the topics to life for students.

Vomeronasal Chemoreception In Vertebrates: A

Study Of The Second Nose

Charles Evans, 2003-07-02 The Vomeronasal Organ is an olfactory structure in the nose originally described in 1813 by the Danish court veterinarian Ludwig Jacobson After some 150 years interest in it was reawakened following the discovery of its key role in social and sexual responses The organ serves to alert the emotional brain to the presence of specific semiochemicals or signal molecules which identify sex or status Typically such scents elicit responses at a non conscious level altering internal chemistry hormones in reaction to odours from the social environment pheromones The importance of vomerolfaction has recently been confirmed by findings on the genetic basis of smell This book surveys the biology of the Organ of Jacobson from toads to tamarins It provides an analysis of the neural pathway which processes pheromonal information delivered by the second nose to the brain Vomeronasal olfaction is examined in its evolutionary perspective from molecular capture of scents to the consequent changes in reproductive activity The treatment integrates structural and functional aspects with the system s development and considers the implications of its unique genome The student or researcher is lead up to the edge of contemporary thinking by an overview of vomerolfactory contributions to individual survival and to population dynamics The issues raised by recent research are evaluated in relation to the properties of primary olfaction Questions posed by the persistence of vomerolfaction as a distinct sense are explored for man and other higher primates The Zoological Record, 1988 Science of Olfaction Michael J. Serby, Karen L. Chodor, 2012-12-06 A book such as this one necessarily entails the effort of many individuals Its first seed was a workshop in 1988 that one of us K L C designed and directed at the City University of New York Graduate Center as part of a series of conferences and workshops on topics in neuropsychology sponsored by the Institute for Research in Behavioral Neuroscience IRBN At that time studies in the efficacy of olfaction as an alternative modality of stimulation in brain injured adults were taking place at IRBN The work shop helped to spark many new ideas among IRBN s staff leading to various projects in clinical intervention some of which are discussed in this volume We soon discovered that clinical interest in olfaction was steadily increasing and that this modality was in many ways on a par with the rest Along with progress in the clinical investigation of olfaction an abundance of work has been published in the basic science of the field Ideas such as the regeneration of olfactory neurons and the use of these neurons in transplantation took hold and were proved to be viable ones These developments along with a profusion of techniques that allow a closer look at the anatomy and physiology of olfaction have contributed to the accelerated pace with which this field is now advancing Dr
