Health Care Advocacy Laura Sessums,Lyle Dennis,Mark Liebow,William Moran,Eugene Rich,2011-08-17 Interest in policy influences on health care is high and will remain high as long as health care costs continue to rise and health care reform remains a hot topic in the news There are inevitable and frequent points of interface between health care public policy and the health professions in their daily work clinicians see the problems with the health care system but often feel powerless and unsure how to advocate for system changes Clinicians and Health Care Advocacy is written by clinicians for clinicians and focuses on how policy works and what individual professionals can do to affect policy It looks at the facts and processes in an accessible way that employs case based examples of clinician advocacy to illustrate its points The book is nonpartisan and will stay neutral on preferences for one public policy solution versus another single payer vs market reform for example Instead it encourages a model of clinicians as responsible for healing not only the individual patient but also the larger health care system in which they work agencies have largely operated in parallel to the world of faith motivated development The World Bank began in the late 1990s to explore ways in which faith and development are connected The issue was not and is not about religion but about the recognition that some of the best experts on development are faith leaders living and working in poor communities where strong ties and moral authority give them unique experience and insight The World Bank's goal is to act as a catalyst and convenor bringing together development practitioners to find common ground understand one another's efforts and explore differences Development and Faith explores and highlights promising partnerships in the world between secular and faith development entities It recounts the evolving history of relationships between faith and secular development institutions It focuses on the Millennium Development Goals as a common framework for action and an opportunity for new forms of collaboration and partnership

Children's Health and Achievement in School Jere R. Behrman, Victor Lavy, 1994-01-01 The commonly held view is that extremely poor health hurts educational achievement This study examined the possibility of biases in standard estimation of effects and illustrated empirically based on Ghanaian Living Standard of Measurement Study data that there was not a significant effect of child health on child cognitive achievement Consideration was given to the endogenous determination of child health Child health was determined by anthropometry Cognitive achievement test scores and preschool ability measured schooling success and child endowments respectively Household and community characteristics and sibling data were used to measure family and community fixed effects The conclusion based on ordinary least squares OLS estimation and instrumental variable level estimates was that child health did not impact on child cognitive achievement The differences between the instrumental variable estimates and the within family and within community estimates suggested bias Four basic conclusions were drawn 1 Considerable bias occurred in prior studies because there was a failure to account for estimation problems 2 Inclusion of instrumental variables assumed to be independent of the disturbance term in the cognitive achievement production function and without controls for simultaneity suggested a downward bias 3 The bias was upward when estimates with sibling data were accounted for Unobserved family and community effects can cause upward biases 4 Coefficients which are supposed to represent the impact of child health on schooling may not do so In the discussion of model specification it was pointed out that upward bias can occur with heterogeneity in preferences regarding child quality in unobserved predetermined family endowments that affect production of child quality and in unobserved predetermined community endowments that affect child quality production The unobserved predetermined child characteristics affect both child health and cognitive achievement in the same direction There can be unobserved heterogeneity in access to capital markets The 2 stage least squares procedure was found to overstate the impact of child health and cause greater distortions than OLS estimates
