created a virtual public sphere outside of and beyond the scope of the ruling Communist Party and its state owned media outlets The authors analyse the paradox of a complicated balancing act of digital participation in an authoritarian state promoting a new understanding of social media in non Western societies The book generates a considerable body of empirical findings relating to political engagement amongst the youth in the digital age and develops the theory of the public sphere beyond Habermas within this context In its examination of the role of social media in society and in political communication generally and the role of social media in authoritarian states specifically this book is of interest to students and scholars researching social media political communication and media theories It is also relevant to those studying the intersection of media and politics in Southeast Asia and in authoritarian states globally

What Is a Person? Christian Smith, 2010-09-15 What is a person? This fundamental question is a perennial concern of philosophers and theologians. But Christian Smith here argues it also lies at the center of the social scientist's quest to interpret and explain social life. In this ambitious book, Smith presents a new model for social theory that does justice to the best of our humanistic visions of people, life, and society. Finding much current thinking on personhood to be confusing or misleading, Smith finds inspiration in critical realism and personalism. Drawing on these ideas, he constructs a theory of personhood that forges a middle path between the extremes of positivist science and relativism. Smith then builds on the work of Pierre Bourdieu, Anthony Giddens, and William Sewall to demonstrate the importance of personhood to our understanding of social structures. From there, he broadens his scope to consider how we can know what is good in personal and social life and what sociology can tell us about human rights and dignity. Innovative, critical, and constructive, What Is a Person offers an inspiring vision of a social science committed to pursuing causal explanations, interpretive understanding, and general knowledge in the service of truth and the moral good.

New technologies have opened up new ways of understanding and participating in learning. Distributed Learning offers a collection of perspectives from a social and cultural practice-based viewpoint, with contributions from leading international authors in the field. Key issues in this comprehensive text are the challenges of ICT to traditional teaching and learning practices, the value and relevance of activity theory and communities of practice in educational institutions and the workplace, perspectives on the relationship between globalisation and distributed learning, and the breakdown of distinctions between global and local contexts, issues of identity and community in designing courses for the virtual student, language and literacies in distributed learning contexts. This book provides useful introductory reading, building a sound theoretical framework for practitioners interested in how distributed learning is shaping post-compulsory education.
