Role Of Politicians In Public Charities:

Public Policy and Foundations Ellen M. Freeberg, Ellen S. Miller, 1987 The 1980s have witnessed a marked increase in the number of tax exempt organizations created by politicians and individuals aspiring to political office All of these organizations have attracted attention because public charities affiliated with political figures pose a paradox On the one hand they have the potential to both educate and promote the public good On the other hand due to their affiliation with an elected official or political aspirant they have the potential to abuse the tax laws under which they operate This book examines a range of organizations closely affiliated with federal politicians and studies the uses and abuses of such an affiliation

The Role of the Charity Commission and Public Benefit Great Britain. Parliament. House of Commons. Public Administration Select Committee, 2013 This report into the implementation of the Charities Act 2006 finds the Charity Commission being asked to do too much with too little The charitable sector is at the heart of UK society involving millions of people and 9.3 billion received in donations in 2011-2012 Around 25 new applications for charitable status are received by the Charity Commission every working day Among the reports findings are one of the keys tests set by the Charities Act 2006 for determining charitable status the public benefit test is critically flawed the Government should revise the statutory objectives for the Charity Commission to allow the Commission to focus its limited resources on regulating the sector the proposal to increase the financial threshold for compulsory registration of a charity with the Charity Commission should be rejected charities should publish their spending on campaigning and political activity PASC criticises the way the Charity Commission has interpreted public benefit under the Act The Committee also considered the impact of face to face fundraising or chugging on the street or on the doorstep and warns that self regulation has failed so far to generate the level of public confidence which is essential to maintain the reputation of the charitable sector The evidence was clear that the regulation of fundraising remains a concern for many members of the public Two in three people have reported feeling uncomfortable as a result of the fundraising methods used by some charities
