Sauter,2021-06-06 This book explores the main currents of European thought between 1350 and 1992 which it approaches in two principal ways culture as produced by place and the progressive unmooring of thought from previously set religious and philosophical boundaries The book reads the period against spatial thought s history spatial sciences such as geography or Euclidean geometry to argue that Europe cannot be understood as a continent in intellectual terms or its history organized with respect to traditional spatial geographic categories Instead we need to understand European intellectual history in terms of a culture that defined its own place as opposed to a place that produced a given culture It then builds on this idea to argue that Europe s overweening drive to know more about humanity and the cosmos continually breached the boundaries set by venerable religious and philosophical traditions In this respect spatial thought foregrounded the human at the unchanging s expense with European thought slowly becoming unmoored as it doggedly produced knowledge at wisdom s expense Michael J Sauter illustrates this by pursuing historical themes across different chapters including European thought s exit from the medieval period the Renaissance the Reformation the Scientific Revolution the Enlightenment and Romanticism the Industrial Revolution and war and culture offering a thorough overview of European thought during this period The book concludes by explaining how contemporary culture has forgotten what early modern thinkers such as Michel de Montaigne still knew namely that too little skepticism toward one s own certainties makes one a danger to others Offering a comprehensive introduction to European thought that stretches from the late fourteenth to the late twentieth century this is the perfect one volume study for students of European intellectual history El-Hi
