Halstead, 1968 November 1994 Major Patterns in Vertebrate Evolution Max Hecht, 2013-11-11 This volume is the result of a NATO Advanced Study Institute held in England at Kingswood Hall of Residence Royal Holloway College London University Surrey during the last two weeks of July 1976 The ASI was organized within the guide lines laid down by the Scientific Affairs Division of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization During the past two decades significant advances have been made in our understanding of vertebrate evolution The purpose of the Institute was to present the current status of our know ledge of vertebrate evolution above the species level Since the subject matter was obviously too broad to be covered adequately in the limited time available selected topics problems and areas which are applicable to vertebrate zoology as a whole were reviewed The program was divided into three areas 1 the theory and methodology of phyletic inference and approaches to the an alysis of macroevolutionary trends as applied to vertebrates 2 the application of these methodological principles and an alytical processes to different groups and structures particular ly in anatomy and paleontology 3 the application of these re sults to classification The basic principles considered in the first area were outlined in lectures covering the problems of character analysis functional morphology karyological evidence biochemical evidence morphogenesis and biogeography

The Pattern of Vertebrate Evolution L. B. Halstead, 1969 Patterns of Vertebrate Biology E.W. Jr. Jameson, 2012-12-06 This book grew from a series of lectures on vertebrate natural history The topics have been developed over a period of nearly 30 years and today scarcely resemble the original subject matter The progress is primarily technical Some concepts provide a synthetic framework for viewing much modern research but many of these concepts either date from Darwin or have developed from obser vations of later students Animal science courses follow a sequential pattern in which there are three discrete levels of undergraduate instruction Initially students study subject mat ter contained in such courses as biology and general zoology These courses intro duce students to animal phylogeny basic plans of morphology and certain phys iological aspects incidental to these subjects the student acquires a broad zoological vocabulary At the other end of the academic spectrum are courses that emphasize synthe sis and theory evolution zoogeography behavior and ecology are important courses whose role is to explore the relationships of various aspects of the physical and biological world In these courses theory and analysis prevail They are not however essentially subject matter courses with distinct bodies of knowledge
