Poverty Reduction In Sri Lanka Issues Findings And Approach:

Poverty Reduction in Sri Lanka Asian Development Bank, 2001 This report explains poverty analysis and diagnoses poverty in Sri Lanka describing its causes and manifestations It also outlines measures in place to reduce poverty and gives a set of strategic options for ADB

Understanding Poverty Reduction in Sri Lanka Lidia Ceriani, 2017 This paper quantifies the contributions to poverty reduction observed in Sri Lanka between 2002 and 2012 13 The methods adopted for the analysis generate entire counterfactual distributions to account for the contributions of demographics labor and non labor incomes in explaining poverty reduction The findings show that the most important contributor to poverty reduction was growth in labor income stemming from an increase in the returns to salaried nonfarm workers and higher returns to self employed farm workers Although some of this increase in earnings may point to improvements in productivity defined as higher units of output per worker some of it may simply reflect increases in food and commodity prices which have increased the marginal revenue product of labor To the extent that there have been no increases in the volumes being produced the observed changes in poverty are vulnerable to reversals if commodity prices were to decline significantly Finally although private transfers domestic and foreign helped to reduce poverty over the period public transfers were not as effective In particular the reduction in the real value of transfers of the Samurdhi program during 2002 to 2012 13 slowed down poverty reduction

Understanding Poverty Reduction in Sri Lanka Lidia Ceriani, Gabriela Inchauste, Sergio Olivieri, 2015 This paper quantifies the contributions to poverty reduction observed in Sri Lanka between 2002 and 2012 13 The methods adopted for the analysis generate entire counterfactual distributions to account for the contributions of demographics labor and non labor incomes in explaining poverty reduction The findings show that the most important contributor to poverty reduction was growth in labor income stemming from an increase in the returns to salaried nonfarm workers and higher returns to self employed farm workers Although some of this increase in earnings may point to improvements in productivity defined as higher units of output per worker some of it may simply reflect increases in food and commodity prices which have increased the marginal revenue product of labor To the extent that there have been no increases in the volumes being produced the observed changes in poverty are vulnerable to reversals if commodity prices were to decline significantly Finally although private transfers domestic and foreign helped to reduce poverty over the period public transfers were not as effective In particular the reduction in the real value of transfers of the Samurdhi program during 2002 to 2012 13 slowed down poverty reduction

Sri Lanka: Joint Staff Assessment of the Poverty Reduction Strategy Paper International Monetary Fund, 2003-04-22 The paper presents key findings of the Joint Staff Assessment of the Poverty Reduction Strategy Paper PRSP for Sri Lanka Despite the country's substantial achievements in human development and the economy's external openness several factors have impeded Sri Lanka's ability to realize its growth potential The IMF staff considers that Sri Lanka's poverty reduction strategy constitutes an adequate policy framework to increase growth and reduce poverty

However its successful implementation will require more work in key areas Monetary Poverty Estimates in Sri Lanka Neranjana Gunetilleke,2008-05 Provides an introduction to poverty related data available in Sri Lanka monetary measurements of poverty carried out using this data The lack of an official poverty line in Sri Lanka until June 2004 has over time generated a number of poverty lines corresponding poverty measures While these poverty measures have provided a good base for poverty analysis this paper also touches on the problems generated by the use of multiple methods The release of the official poverty line by the Dept of Census Statistics can be seen as a major step forward in the debate on poverty measurement in Sri Lanka Charts tables Poverty Reduction that Works Paul Steele,Neil Fernando,Maneka Weddikkara,2012-05-04 This book provides an excellent framework to analyse the experience of a wide variety of successful initiatives across the world and draws attention to critical issues that practitioners need to think about when designing poverty reduction interventions and scaling up Bill Tod Regional MDG Adviser SNV Asia With its wide regional coverage and frank discussions of issues and problems encountered in designing projects that directly tackle poverty this will be a very useful reference book for NGOs INGOs and also for multilateral institutions Johanna Boestel Country Economist Asian Development Bank Sri Lanka Resident Mission We are now at the midpoint for achieving the Millennium Development Goals and the objective of halving poverty by 2015 Despite commendable efforts and much progress up to 750 million people are still living in absolute poverty To lift these people out of poverty macro economic policies must be complemented by targeted and local level poverty reduction This book looks at twenty of the most innovative case studies of poverty reduction and Millennium Development Goal localization from fifteen countries Afghanistan Bangladesh Cambodia China Egypt India Indonesia Malaysia Mexico Nepal Paraguay Philippines Sri Lanka Thailand and Vietnam covering diverse issues ranging from housing and tourism to socio economic empowerment of women health insurance and markets for livestock produce Many of the cases started as small scale interventions by NGOs donors or government pilots but now they are being scaled up to form part of national policy or replicated across their respective countries Yet why do some work while others do not What are the stumbling blocks and how can they be overcome And what lessons and principles are there for replicating and scaling up poverty reduction initiatives worldwide This book tackles these questions and more and presents a wealth of knowledge evidence and ideas for all practitioners and researchers working to reduce poverty at the local level while aiming to achieve a global impact Published with UNDP The Effects of Bureaucratic Power on the Policy Process Herath Jayatunge,Australian National University. Crawford School of Public Policy,2013 Management theories and practices of the late 20th and early 21st centuries encourage elected and public officials to work together constructively during the policymaking and policy implementation process However within this process the on the ground relationships that develop between elected and public officials tend to span the spectrum from independent through to interdependent interactions This thesis reveals that the nature of their relationship has profound effects on policy outcomes in this case on poverty reduction policies in Sri Lanka The findings show that the parties involved have a dynamic relationship that develops over time in response to tit for tat behaviours on the part of each group behaviours that can be either trust building or trust destroying A central part of this process is the exercise of discretion in the policymaking and policy implementation stages of poverty reduction policy in Sri Lanka The thesis investigates how bureaucratic power is exercised in the two policy stages of Sri Lanka s poverty reduction policy questioning how bureaucratic power affects the policy process In order to reveal the potential influence of bureaucratic power and bureaucratic capacity to enact discretionary power during policymaking and policy implementation the thesis examines the relationship between elected and public officials the bureaucratic capacity to exercise discretion in the face of political control and the political capacity to control bureaucratic discretion It also explores whether such interactions facilitate or interrupt the end purposes of poverty reduction depending on the degree of trust developed between the parties An investigation of the outcomes of poverty reduction policies in Sri Lanka reveals that there is considerable variability in outcomes with some geographic regions in the country considered to be high performing and others low performing Implementation of poverty related policies such as health policy and education policy has shown high performance within metropolitan areas however specific poverty reduction policies have not shown similar levels of performance in metropolitan areas Therefore a primary aim of this study is to investigate to what extent the level of performance in terms of outcomes is dependent on managerial capacity and functional capability of senior public officials as well as the nature of the relationship that develops between these parties in the policy process The key finding of this thesis is that the diverse relationships between elected and public officials are central to the dynamics of the policy process While the exercise of discretion has been used as a strategy both to overcome the difficulties that elected and public officials face and to build trust it can also destroy the trust between elected and public officials The study shows that Sri Lankan policymakers need to address the constructive rather than disruptive aspects of the exercise of discretionary power because discretion can be used for building trust between elected and public officials during the policy process in order to accomplish policy goals

Poverty and Human Development in Sri Lanka Ramani Gunatilaka,Guanghua Wan,Shiladitya Chatterjee,2010-12-01 This report aims to summarize the current state of poverty in Sri Lanka by tracing its causes and recommending policies Special attention is paid to human development issues in the conflict affected areas The ongoing conflict in the north and east remains both the principal cause for poverty and the most binding constraint to human development in Sri Lanka The Integrated Rural Development Programme in Sri Lanka Ramani Gunatilaka,1999

Policy Note Weltbank,2012 To rejuvenate the slow poverty alleviation process in Sri Lanka the first step would be to better understand the geographical distribution of poverty which in turn would require estimating poverty at a level of disaggregation lower than the district level This policy note summarizes results and experience of a poverty mapping exercise in Sri Lanka that has been conducted in close collaboration with the Department of Census and Statistics DCS since

2003 The results of poverty mapping successfully indicate where pockets of severe poverty remain in Sri Lanka and provide interesting insights poverty measured as a percentage of population is higher in remote areas while the absolute number of the poor is larger in urban areas Also preliminary results drawn from a map with very high resolution indicate that there are some pockets of poverty even in Colombo District the growth center of the country The aim of this report is threefold First the report demonstrates that the poverty mapping method developed by Elbers et al 2003 is a useful tool to illustrate the spatial heterogeneity in poverty incidence in Sri Lanka at different levels of resolution section 2 Second it highlights the importance of capacity building in ensuring the sustainability of the poverty mapping work section 3 Third it discusses new observations regarding the statistical properties of the methodology section 4

The World Bank and Poverty Reduction in Sri Lanka Seamus Cleary, 1995 Includes statistics

A Skeptical Perspective on Income Redistribution and Poverty Reduction in Sri Lanka Scott Grosse, 1981 This paper challenges the widely held idea that the distribution of income has become more equal in Sri Lanka in recent years and that the living standards of the poor have risen substantially The survey data on income distribution is internally inconsistent and subject to so many biases that it is not possible to rigorously determine the direction or magnitude of the change in income distribution More importantly there is no evidence that the living standards improved for any major population segment during the period in which income is considered more equally distributed
