Social Influences on Vocal Development Charles T. Snowdon, Martine Hausberger, 1997-03-20 For at least 30 years there have been close parallels between studies of birdsong development and those of the development of human language Both song and language require species specific stimulation at a sensitive period in development and subsequent practice through subsong and plastic song in birds and babbling in infant humans leading to the development of characteristic vocalisations for each species This book illustrates how social interactions during development can shape vocal learning and extend the sensitive period beyond infancy and how social companions can induce flexibility even into adulthood Social companions in a wide range of species including birds and humans but also cetaceans and nonhuman primates play important roles in shaping vocal production as well as the comprehension and appropriate usage of vocal communication This book will be required reading for students and researchers interested in animal and human communication and its development

Children's Language K. E. Nelson, 2014-03-18 First published in 1983 This series Children's Language reflects the conviction that extensive work on entirely new fronts along with a great deal of reinterpretation of old front data will be necessary before any persuasive and truly orderly account of language For all volumes in the series there is a common scheme of operation with two tactics First to give authors sufficient planning time and freedom to arrive at a chapter length account of their area of thinking which vividly shows both the progress and the problems in that area with the author of each chapter free to find a workable proportion of new experimental contributions review and theory The second tactic concerns the selection of topics for each volume This is Volume 4 Structures about language and thought and children as employed in certain other fields may well be shaken and stimulated particularly in education sociology anthropology literature and language remediation
