Abstract

Introduction: Pain neuroscience education is part of interdisciplinary pain management programs (PMPs). To date, the role of health literacy on patients' understanding of pain neuroscience education has not sufficiently been examined.

Objectives: Drawing on interviews with patients with diverse levels of health literacy, this article explores patient perspectives on pain neuroscience education.

Methods: Purposively sampled patients from an IPMP were interviewed twice (waiting list and after 4 weeks). A directed qualitative content analysis was performed with the Integrated Conceptual Model of Health Literacy as an analytic framework.

Results: Thirteen patients with chronic musculoskeletal pain were interviewed: 4 men and 9 women aged from 21 to 77 years with diverse educational and mostly low health literacy. One participant dropped out after baseline. Some participants gained access to health information actively; others relied on the expertise of their healthcare providers. Most participants did not seem to receive the information in the pain neuroscience education as intended, experienced difficulties with understanding the message, negatively appraised the information, and were not able to apply this in their daily lives. Health literacy levels likely played a role in this.

Conclusions: Pain neuroscience education tailored to patients' health literacy levels, information needs, and learning strategies is needed.

Keywords: Health literacy, Patient education, Qualitative research, Interview, Pain management, Musculoskeletal pain

1. Introduction

Patients with persistent chronic musculoskeletal pain are frequently referred to interdisciplinary pain management programmes (IPMPs). A biopsychosocial approach, based on the understanding that chronic pain should be viewed as a dynamic interaction involving biological, psychological, and social factors unique to each individual, is used to help patients develop effective pain management strategies.^{1,2} Pain neuroscience education (PNE), an evidence-based form of pain education, aims to reconceptualize patients' pain, encouraging them to understand it through a biopsychosocial (rather than biomedical) lens by explaining pain biology.^{3,10,15,23} A systematic review has shown that PNE reduces catastrophising and increases knowledge about the complexity of pain.¹⁰ Pain neuroscience education is therefore an important part of these programs to improve patients' understanding of their chronic musculoskeletal pain. Pain neuroscience education outcomes are expected to be highly dependent on whether the patient can grasp the content of the education. Low

Pain Matisyohu Weisenberg, 1976 NIDA Research Monograph, 1976 Published Scientific Papers of the National Institutes of Health National Institutes of Health (U.S.), 1977 Each issue lists papers published during the preceding year Progress in Behavior Modification Michel Hersen, Richard M. Eisler, Peter M. Miller, 2013-10-22 Progress in Behavior Modification Volume 8 covers the developments in the study of behavior modification The book discusses the conceptual issues and treatment interventions for obsessive compulsives the behavioral study of clinical phobias and fear reduction techniques with children The text also describes the behavioral treatments for marital discord the behavioral treatment of headaches and the behavioral assessment and treatment of clinical pain The modification of academic performance in the grade school classroom is also considered Psychologists psychiatrists sociologists and educators will find the book invaluable The Myth of Pain Valerie Gray Hardcastle, 1999 Valerie Gray Hardcastle argues that both professional and lay definitions of pain are wrongheaded with consequences for how pain and pain patients are treated how psychological disorders are understood and how clinicians define the mind body relationship Pain although very common is little understood Worse still according to Valerie Gray Hardcastle both professional and lay definitions of pain are wrongheaded with consequences for how pain and pain patients are treated how psychological disorders are understood and how clinicians define the mind body relationship Hardcastle offers a biologically based complex theory of pain processing inhibition and sensation and then uses this theory to make several arguments 1 psychogenic pains do not exist 2 a general lack of knowledge about fundamental brain function prevents us from distinguishing between mental and physical causes although the distinction remains useful 3 most pain talk should be eliminated from both the folk and academic communities and 4 such a biological approach is useful generally for explaining disorders in pain processing She shows how her analysis of pain can serve as a model for the analysis of other psychological disorders and suggests that her project be taken as a model for the philosophical analysis of disorders in psychology psychiatry and neuroscience International Handbook of Behavior Modification and Therapy Alan S. Bellack, Michel Hersen, Alan E. Kazdin, 2012-12-06 It is particularly gratifying to prepare a second edition of a book because there is the necessary implication that the first edition was well received Moreover now an opportunity is provided to correct the problems or limitations that existed in the first edition as well as to address recent developments in the field Thus we are grateful to our friends colleagues and students as well as to the reviewers who have expressed their approval of the first edition and who have given us valuable input on how the revision could best be structured Perhaps the first thing that the reader will notice about the second edition is that it is more extensive than the first The volume currently has 41 chapters in contrast to the 31 chapters that comprised the earlier version Chapters 3 9 29 and 30 of the first edition either have been dropped or were combined whereas 14 new chapters have been added In effect we are gratified in being able to reflect the continued growth of behavior therapy in the 1980s

Behavior therapists have addressed an ever increasing number of disorders and behavioral dysfunctions in an increasing range of populations The most notable advances are taking place in such areas as cognitive approaches geriatrics and behavioral medicine and also in the treatment of childhood disorders Using Guided Imagery and Hypnosis in Brief Therapy and Palliative Care Rubin Battino,2020-11-16 Using Guided Imagery and Hypnosis in Brief Therapy and Palliative Care presents a model for effective single session therapy Chapters include more than a dozen case studies with transcripts and commentary Readers will learn how to use an adapted model of Remen s healing circle for preparing patients for surgery and guided imagery and other approaches are presented for enhancing palliative care Extensive appendixes provide a wide variety of valuable tools that psychotherapists can use with clients concerned with end of life issues Rehabilitation and Treatment of Head and Neck Cancer Eugene N. Myers,Ivan Barofsky,Jerome William Yates,1986 This monograph is the result of a workshop entitled Head and Neck Cancer Integration of Treatment and Rehabilitation which was held in January 1984 and sponsored by the National Cancer Institute The purpose of the workshop was to review past research directions focused on head and neck cancer and set new goals where appropriate As discussed at the meeting the goal of integrating treatment and rehabilitation is to prevent or minimize the physical cosmetic or functional disability and the emotional sequelae commonly associated with head and neck cancer and its treatment The meeting afforded an opportunity for a diverse group of professionals to exchange ideas and information on effective and desirable methods of treatment and rehabilitation for head and neck cancer patients Papers were presented and discussions were held with the aim of identifying and resolving some of the problems faced by those who make treatment decisions and provide care for these patients This workshop highlighted the need for an integration of multi disciplinary rehabilitation planning at the time of initial treatment for head and neck cancer It also demonstrated major deficiencies in objective outcome measures used to assess physiological and social function over and above the usual measures of patient survival Centers which provide multidisciplinary patient management programs and follow adequate patient populations thus assuring management proficiency provide the best means of avoiding many of the pitfalls that threaten patients who are managed by a single physician and exposed sequentially to other disciplines only when problems develop Few other cancers demonstrate the need for anticipatory treatment and rehabilitation to the magnitude required in the management of head and neck cancer Medical Psychology Charles K. Prokop,Laurence A. Bradley,2013-10-22 Medical Psychology Contributions to Behavioral Medicine discusses the relationship between medical psychology and behavioral medicine and includes critical reviews of the status of diagnostic treatment and preventive approaches to a wide variety of medical disorders such as hypertension cancer and chronic pain A quantitative and qualitative approach to neuropsychological evaluation is also presented Comprised of 26 chapters this book begins by tracing the history of the relationship between psychology and medicine and assessing the status of psychology s role in the medical center The second and third sections deal with approaches to the assessment treatment and prevention of various medical disorders including hypertension cancer and cardiovascular disease The third section also examines several special problems within the provinces of medical psychology and behavioral medicine The fourth section presents reviews of clinical and research topics of particular interest to all medical psychologists and behavioral medicine specialists including adherence to health care regimens and professional services evaluation in a medical setting This monograph will be of value to research investigators and practitioners within the behavioral sciences and medicine

Musculoskeletal Medicine L. Burn,J.K. Paterson,2012-12-06 Neck and back pain are common symptoms which vary from the trivial to the incapacitating Conventional medical textbooks concentrate disproportionately on those causes which have clear cut diagnostic patterns and pathological features demonstrable by investigations Discussions of treatment often overemphasize the importance of the tiny minority of patients who proceed to surgery Real life is very different The majority of patients who consult their general practitioners do not suffer from readily categorized diseases have no diagnostic investigational signs and often respond to treatment in no other way than that expected from the passage of time It is not surprising that such a situation has led to the emergence of a number of gurus both orthodox and unorthodox who provide diagnostic labels and treatment methods united by only one thing certainty I had expected two such prominent exponents of manipulative techniques as the authors of this book to be among those offering certainty and demanding blind acceptance but I was wrong This book explores the scientific basis for treatment and evaluates a variety of therapeutic options It offers an approach to assessment and treatment which is overtly pragmatic but firmly based in conventional clinical medicine It is a book which invites discussion comment and criticism in an area where many texts offer little but dogmatism
