Atlas of Cutaneous Branch Territories for the Diagnosis of Neuropathic Pain Claude J. Spicher, Tara L. Packham, Nadège Buchet, Isabelle Quintal, Pierre Sprumont, 2020-09-24 This atlas is the result of research involving over 3 000 patients consecutively recruited since 2004 Clinical practice gives the opportunity to observe many more A axonal lesions axonotmesis than transections neurotmesis consequently the mapped hypo aesthetic territories are partial Therefore the authors define for each cutaneous nerve branch the autonomous territory and the boundary markers of the largest territory of cutaneous origin Each anatomical chart of a cutaneous branch is the superposition of tens even hundreds of observations seen in clinical practice based on 3 133 maps of observed cutaneous hypoaesthetic territories The data collected has also been cross referenced with that published in nearly 100 other anatomy books This 1st English edition based on the 3rd French edition published by Sauramps Medical illustrates the usefulness of anatomical knowledge for clinical practice More precisely it seeks to demonstrate how these topographic elements can offer valuable support both for the clinical anamnesis and for the clinical examination of neuropathic pain patients This atlas is at the crossroads between the medical and rehabilitation disciplines Accordingly it addresses the needs of medical doctors from GPs to specialists and of pain therapists and offers a valuable asset for all health professionals who are dedicated to the management of pain and associated problems

Quantitative Assessment and Validation of Network Inference Methods in Bioinformatics Benjamin Haihe-Kains, Frank Emmert-Streib, 2015-04-14 Scientists today have access to an unprecedented arsenal of high tech tools that can be used to thoroughly characterize biological systems of interest High throughput omics technologies enable to generate enormous quantities of data at the DNA RNA epigenetic and proteomic levels One of the major challenges of the post genomic era is to extract functional information by integrating such heterogeneous high throughput genomic data This is not a trivial task as we are increasingly coming to understand that it is not individual genes but rather biological pathways and networks that drive an organism s response to environmental factors and the development of its particular phenotype In order to fully understand the way in which these networks interact or fail to do so in specific states disease for instance we must learn both the structure of the underlying networks and the rules that govern their behavior In recent years there has been an increasing interest in methods that aim to infer biological networks These methods enable the opportunity for better understanding the interactions between genomic features and the overall structure and behavior of the underlying networks So far such network models have been mainly used to identify and validate new interactions between genes of interest But ultimately one could use these networks to predict large scale effects of perturbations such as treatment by multiple targeted drugs However currently we are still at an early stage of comprehending methods and approaches providing a robust statistical framework to quantitatively assess the quality of network inference and its predictive potential The scope of this Research Topic in Bioinformatics and Computational Biology aims at addressing these issues by investigating the various complementary approaches to quantify the quality of network models These validation techniques could focus on assessing quality of specific interactions global and local structures and predictive ability of network models These methods could rely exclusively on in silico evaluation procedures or they could be coupled with novel experimental designs to generate the biological data necessary to properly validate inferred networks

IgA Nephropathy Today Y. Tomino, Claudio Ronco, 2007-07 Primary IgA nephropathy has first been described as a new disease entity almost 40 years ago This disorder considered to be an immune complex mediated glomerulonephritis is characterized by granular deposition of IgA mainly IgA1 and C3 in the glomerular mesangial areas and is defined as nephropathy showing proliferative changes in the glomerular mesangial cells and increases in the mesangial matrices Apart from being one of the most common types of chronic glomerulonephritis it is also the most frequent case of end stage renal disease But even though continuing efforts have gradually clarified various aspects of the pathogenesis of the disease specific treatment is not yet available In this publication international nephrologists and basic scientists report the most recent data on IgA nephropathy Starting with clinical reviews on topics such as the clinico pathological classification new treatment approaches and the role of renal biopsies the focus then shifts towards basic reviews on for example candidate genes the pathogenic role of IgA receptors or immune complex formation Updates on clinical and basic advances discussing among other things the influence of obesity or various therapeutic approaches make up the second part of the book Presenting up to date information on this still mysterious disease the publication at hand constitutes a valuable source of information for nephrologists general practitioners residents and interns
