

21 Developing Behavior Change Interventions

Nelli Hankonen and Wendy Hardeman

Practical Summary

When trying to help people change behavior, it is important that intervention designers consider carefully what actions might bring about the desired outcomes and why. A systematic approach to intervention development aids this process. Key tasks are (1) identify and analyze the problem addressed by the intervention; (2) identify how the intervention will achieve the desired outcomes, decide on its content and delivery mode(s), and design a logic model or program theory; (3) develop intervention materials or prototypes (e.g., interface); and (4) test or pilot the intervention iteratively in an early stage. This approach can be adopted to develop new interventions and to optimize existing interventions. It is useful to build an explicit model of assumed influences of an intervention during its design, including influences on behavior, contextual influences on implementation, and the causal pathway involved. The decisions about intervention content and delivery modes are informed by an understanding of the target group, behaviors, context, and working mechanisms of behavior change techniques.

21.1 Introduction

Intervention development is an essential process in which several parties work together to produce an intervention that is fit-for-purpose and likely to be effective in changing the behavior of the target population. Parties involved are likely to include practitioners, researchers, the target group, and other stakeholders (see also Chapters 24 and 25, this volume). The scope of development work is influenced by the available time and resources. The aim of this chapter is to provide an overview of the basic steps in the intervention development process. The chapter shows how careful development helps ensure that the intervention is (1) informed by evidence from multiple sources (e.g., the research literature, the target group or population, stakeholders, relevant theory); (2) that the intervention is an appropriate solution to a problem; (3) that context and any challenges in the implementation of the intervention have been carefully considered and addressed; (4) that feasibility, acceptability, and resource use (value for money) have been considered at an early stage; (5) that the intervention is optimized prior to evaluation; and (6) that the evaluation will focus on key uncertainties about the intervention. A carefully reported development process is also crucial in understanding issues arising from intervention implementation, such as providing insight into what may have gone wrong if the intervention does not achieve stipulated goals or is labeled as “ineffective.” It also provides necessary detail to contribute to the evidence base of behavioral interventions and behavior change theories. The chapter will focus on the development of behavior change interventions across disciplines and

Transforming School Mental Health Services

Beth Doll, Jack A. Cummings, 2007-09-12 This soundly structured book reinforces and enriches educators skills in population based mental health. It provides usable information on how to get administrative buy in for implementing coordinated proven prevention and intervention practices. Rich with Web connections and references it can serve as a textbook, a practitioner's workbook and as a tool kit for implementation. Kevin P. Dwyer, Consultant Turnaround for Children, Former President National Association of School Psychologists. The road map for designing and implementing effective mental health services for all students. Studies have shown that mental wellness is a key determinant of students academic and developmental success but simply addressing the problems of individual students is not enough. Increasingly schools are turning to population based models for providing mental health services to ensure that students maintain the psychological, social and emotional competence needed for learning. This comprehensive guidebook demonstrates how to use this approach to effectively assess mental health needs and design appropriate prevention and intervention strategies that will benefit individual students, whole classrooms and an entire school population. Drawing from a wealth of current research and backed by evidence supporting the effectiveness of the population based approach, this wide ranging resource offers formal and informal strategies for identifying and prioritizing a school's mental health needs as well as risk and protective factors. Insights into creating and managing a nurturing school environment, promoting psychological well being and preventing mental health problems. Suggestions for engaging parents in the process of fostering mental health. Intervention strategies that address significant behavioral problems including violence, bullying, depression and difficulty relating to peers. An integrated ten step sequence for shifting from conventional approaches that focus only on individual problems to population based services that support all students. Transforming School Mental Health Services is the ideal resource for school mental health professionals and critical decision makers looking to optimize students wellness and educational performance.

Scaling Effective School Mental Health Interventions and Practices Lee Kern, Mark D. Weist, Samuel D. McQuillin, 2024-09-30 This book describes key practices to bring school mental health programs to scale in a sustainable and effective manner. It emphasizes practices that facilitate the organization and delivery of evidence based mental health interventions in schools. The volume addresses systems issues and practices that lay the groundwork for creating sustainable school mental health programs. It explores important considerations at the school, district and state levels, tiered intervention as a framework to support school mental health, preparing the workforce, resource utilization and assuring cultural responsiveness and equity for underserved groups of students. In addition, the book focuses on recent and emerging evidence based practices for practicably scaling school mental health in schools. Chapters examine systematic screening followed by specific interventions including just in time training and single session interventions. The book concludes with a focus on ways to address systemic barriers to school mental health such as addressing the mental health of immigrants. Key areas of coverage include Communities of practice at different levels of scale e.g. school, building, national. Resource mapping across schools and communities. Screening to match
