form genre and content of contemporary Chinese print media It describes and analyses the role of post reform social stratification in the media focusing particularly on how the changing practices and institutions of the industry correspond to and accelerate the emergence of a relatively affluent urban leisure reading market It argues that this reinvention of Chinese print media vis vis the creation of a post socialist taste class culture is an essential part of the cultural and affective transformations in contemporary Chinese society and demonstrates how the reinvention of such taste culture effectively creates through new kinds of reading materials and carefully demarcated target audiences a middle class civility that serves as the locus of the new niche media market Contemporary Culture and Media in Asia Daniel Black,Olivia Khoo,Koichi Iwabuchi,2016-09-23 The study of Asian culture media and communications is an area that has developed rapidly over the past two decades This rapid development has led to the deployment of diverse scholarly approaches while simultaneously raising important questions regarding the extent to which the use of key terms such as nation citizenship and modernity must be modified to reflect the specificity of an Asian context Furthermore the irrepressible flows of popular cultural forms and the enthusiastic adoption of new communications technologies across the region demand approaches that can accommodate the dynamism and diversity of Asian culture and media Contemporary Culture and Media in Asia brings together leading scholars from Asia North America and Australia to address questions related to these challenges producing new insights and frameworks that can be productively utilized by students and scholars working in the field
