Review of the diversity of palm oil production systems in Indonesia Baudoin, A.,Bosc, P-M,Bessou, C.,Levang, P.,2017-05-09 This paper proposes an overview of the development of oil palm production in Indonesia combining two levels i a national and historical perspective of the development of the sector ii a regional approach considering two contrasting provinces Riau and Jambi Starting with colonial times the national approach deals first with the main periods that punctuate the development of oil palm plantations up to the contemporary period marked by the liberalization of the economy It emphasizes several factors that played a strategic role in the development of palm oil production such as the role of the State and migration After presenting the different models that structure the relationships among stakeholders and how these relationships have evolved the role of small family planters is analyzed This section ends with a review of some controversial issues livelihood improvement land tenure and customary rights inclusion versus exclusion market risks forest and environmental threats and governance The regional approach gives context to the development of palm oil production within two territories that have different historical backgrounds with Jambi entering into production relatively recently In each of the two provinces the themes and issues involved in palm oil development identified at national level are analyzed with specific emphasis on stakeholders strategic behaviours The paper concludes with a comparative perspective on both provinces Local Foods Meet Global Foodways Benjamin Lawrance,Carolyn de la Peña,2013-09-13 This book explores the intersection of food and foodways from global and local perspectives The collection contributes to interdisciplinary debates about the role and movement of commodities in the historical and contemporary world The expert contributions collectively address a fundamental tension in the emerging scholarly terrain of food studies namely theorizing the relationship between foodstuff production and cuisine patterns They explore a wide variety of topics including curry bread sugar coffee milk pulque Virginia ham fast food obesity and US ethnic restaurants Local Foods Meet Global Foodways considers movements in context and in doing so complicates the notions that food shapes culture as it crosses borders or that culture adapts foods to its neo local or global contexts By analysing the dynamics of contact between mobile foods and or people and the specific cultures of consumption they provoke these case studies reveal the process whereby local foods become global or global foods become local to be a dynamic co creative development jointly facilitated by humans and nature This volume explores a vast expanse of global regions such as North and Central America Europe China East Asia and the Pacific India sub Saharan Africa the Atlantic Ocean and the USSR Russia It includes a foreword by the eminent food scholar Carole Counihan and an afterword by noted theorist of cuisine Rachel Laudan and will be of great interest to students and researchers of history anthropology geography cultural studies and American studies This book is based on a special issue of Food and Foodways Sugar, Steam and Steel G. Roger Knight, 2014 Sugar Steam and Steel is about cane sugar and the transformation of an Indonesian island into the Oriental Cuba during the middle decades of the nineteenth century Between the 1830s and the 1880s sweetener manufacture in Dutch controlled Java the crown jewel of the erstwhile Netherlands Indies drew decisively away in matters of technology and sugar science from other Asian centres of production which had once equaled or more often surpassed it in terms of both output and know how Along with its larger and altogether more famous Caribbean counterpart Java's industry came to occupy a position at the apex of the trade in what had become by this date a key global commodity Along with the beet sugar producers of post 1870 Imperial Germany Cuba and Java accounted for a little over one third of the world's recorded output of the industrially manufactured kind of sugar usually referred to as centrifugal While Cuba held the position of the world's largest supplier of cane sugar to international commodity markets Dutch Java emerged from almost nowhere to take second place The island had begun the nineteenth century as one of a number of centres in fact a rather minor one of pre industrial sugar production located in tropical and sub tropical Asia from the Indian sub continent through to the southernmost islands of Japan It ended the century not only as by far the largest of Asia's producer exporters of sugar but also critically as the sole example of the sustained and successful large scale industrialisation of sugar manufacture anywhere in the East Sugar Steam and Steel sets out to explain how and why this happened and what its implications were for the long term trajectory of the Java sugar industry in the international sugar economy

Cover description Forgotten People: Poverty, Risk and Social Security in Indonesia Gerben Nooteboom, 2014-11-28 In Forgotten People Gerben Nooteboom describes and analyses the livelihoods and social security of peasants and migrant Madurese It offers a new way to categorise and analyse livelihood security of marginal people in Indonesia by using the concept of style Agricultural Development in a Frontier Region of Java S. Nawiyanto, 2003 A World of Water Peter Boomgaard, 2007 Water in its many guises has always played a powerful role in shaping Southeast Asian histories cultures societies and economies This volume the rewritten results of an international workshop with participants from 8 countries contains 13 essays representing a broad range of approaches to the study of Southeast Asia with water as the central theme European Newsletter of Southeast Asian Studies, 1994 Narratives of Colonialism G. R. Knight, 2000 This book examines the interwoven issues of sugar Java and the Dutch from a broadly post colonial standpoint Sugar's history forms one of the crucial meta narratives of Western colonialism The history of the commodity is integral to that long association between cane sugar and the overseas expansion of the Western powers that had its origins in the Atlantic islands in the fifteenth century From there it spread to the New World and by the nineteenth century into parts of Asia and the Pacific The subsequent threat to cane sugar's pre eminence as a sweetener posed from the mid nineteenth century onward by sugar made from beet only served to further consolidate that connection The colonial metropolitan tie with its promise of protective tariffs and a secure home market became more than ever central to the industry's sustained development In associated mode colonial states renewed their efforts to subordinate land and labour to sugar's particular requirements. Only in the second half of the twentieth century was the nexus formally broken, leaving cane sugar as an often potent legacy of colonialism for the post colonial order. The commercial production of cane sugar in Java dated from the first half of the seventeenth century. It took place there until the early nineteenth century under the patronage of the Dutch East India Company and its successors. The actual business of manufacture largely carried on by Chinese settlers was working in rather varied relationships with Javanese workers and peasant farmers. During the mid nineteenth century decades however the industry was transformed. It became the first of its kind in Asia successfully to adopt the panoply of steam, steel and chemistry which formed the technological basis of industrialised sugar man.
