Secondary Spread In Breast Cancer New Aspects Of Breast Cancer Volume 3:

Adjuvant Therapies and Markers of Post-Surgical Minimal Residual Disease I Gianni Bonadonna, G. Mathe, S. E. Salmon, 2012-12-06 P Denoix and G Mathe Approximately 70% of cancer patients relapse after surgery before the 5th year and in most cases for example in breast carcinoma they relapse still later up to the 20th year For some considerable time the strategy of cancer treatment has been limited to the sophistication of surgery radiotherapy combinations that maximally decreased the incidence of local and regional relapses in sites that were within their reach Today the practice of clinical oncology is unthinkable without the active participation of the medical oncologist He is the third man of the clinical oncology team and he has recently focused attention on the fact that most relapses arise from distant metastases due to the proliferation of cells seeded there after having left the primary tumor site at the time of operation and hence are inaccessible to any form of local and or regional treatment On this evidence medical oncologists have proposed the application of medical treatments for disseminated minimal residual disease MRD They have two available means chemotherapy and immunotherapy Medical oncologists in general can be divided into three groups chemotherapists immunotherapists and chemoimmunotherapists The pure chemotherapists who had already cured some malignant neoplasias such as Hodgkin's disease acute lymphoid leukemia placental choriocarcinoma and Wilms tumor thought they might have the means of attacking the residual disease of common cancers
