Remembered Irene Rose Light,2011-10-04 I was born on May 24 1939 in Makati Philippines and named Irene Rose the fifth child of Newton and Nellie Light and raised in Virginia and California I completed two years college in Compton California aspiring to become a Fashion Illustrator Designer Instead I started working as a Clerk Secretary in the medical field My last employer as a Supervisor was with a Department of Defense Contractor based in Los Angeles I Retired in March 2006 For years after leaving the nest I visited my parents regularly Their home was where all family members and friends gathered for Sunday dinners important celebrations and holidays After my retirement my mother passed way May 3rd the same year due to her declining health and age Our family found closure as months passed sharing many memories about her After the first anniversary of her death I told my siblings I needed to tell Mama's story Her difficult young life and marriage surviving World War II a bitter divorce and deep concern about the welfare of her first seven children Finally she had a meaningful life with Peter in California and having four more children Nellie a wife mother and grandmother exercised her right to be for all the days of her life May I say with the little experience I have in creative writing much less authorship in 2007 I started outlining bits and pieces on the laptop and this year I completed Mama's biography I hope my siblings and other kin will enjoy it and catch up on some family history Other readers who finish the book might be inspired to write a story about someone special they want remembered

The World of Juliette Kinzie Ann Durkin Keating, 2019-11-07 A fascinating biography of an early Chicago settler a social and cultural force in the city and one of America's first female historians Chicago Sun Times When Juliette Kinzie first visited Chicago in 1831 it was anything but a city An outpost in the shadow of Fort Dearborn it had no streets no sidewalks no schools no river spanning bridges And with two hundred disconnected residents it lacked any sense of community In the decades that followed not only did Juliette witness the city's transition from Indian country to industrial center but she was instrumental in its development one of the women in this man's city who worked to create an urban and urbane world often within their own parlors Here we finally get to experience the rise of Chicago from the view of one of its founding mothers In a moving portrait of a trailblazing and complicated woman Keating takes us to the corner of Cass and Michigan now Wabash and Hubbard Juliette's home base Through Juliette's eyes our understanding of early Chicago expands from a city of boosters and speculators to include the world women created in and between households We see the development of Chicago society first inspired by Eastern cities and later coming into its own midwestern ways We also see the city become a community as it developed its intertwined religious social educational and cultural institutions Keating draws on a wealth of sources including hundreds of Juliette's personal letters allowing Juliette to tell much of her story in her own words Juliette's death in 1870 just a year before the infamous fire seemed almost prescient She left her beloved Chicago right before the physical city as she knew it vanished in flames But now her history lives on in a biography that offers a new perspective on Chicago's past An authority on Chicago's history Keating draws on a trove of family documents Illustrations are a particular strength of the book including maps portraits and photographs of houses the latter are particularly apt because the book is an exploration of people's lives within households Journal of the Early Republic Chronicles the history of women in early colonial America an area that benefits from this addition to the genre The American Historical Review A remarkable book The Journal of American History
