Leff,2009-04 In the hot summer of 2004 David Leff floated away from the routine of daily life just as Henry David Thoreau and his brother had done in their own small boat in 1839 Fortified with Thoreau s observations as revealed in A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers Leff brought his own concept of mindful deep travel to these same New England waterways His first person narrative uses his ecological way of looking of going deep rather than far to show that our outward journeys are inseparable from our inward ones How we see depends on where we are in our lives and with whom we travel Leff chose his companions wisely In consecutive journeys his neighbor and friend Alan a veteran city planner his son Josh an energetic eleven year old and his sweetheart Pamela a compassionate professional caregiver added their perspectives to Leff's own experiences as a government official in natural resources policy. Not so much sight seeing as sight seeking together they explored a geography of the imagination as well as the rich natural and human histories of the rivers and their communities. The heightened awareness of deep travel demands that we immerse ourselves fully in places and realize that they exist in time as well as space. Its mindfulness enriches the experience and makes the voyager worthy of the journey. Leff's intriguing contemplative deep travel along these historic rivers presents a methodology for exploration that will enrich any trip.

Messy Ethnographies in Action Alexandra Plows, 2018-04-30 This edited collection of chapters showcases original and interdisciplinary ethnographic fieldwork in a range of international settings including studies of underground pub life in North East England, Finnish hotels and bio scientific institutions in the Amazonian rainforest. Informed by John Law's concept of ethnographic mess, this book makes a unique empirically informed contribution to an understanding of the social construction of knowledge and the role that ethnography can and does play. Law, 2004. It provides a range of colourful snapshots from the field showing how different researchers from multiple research environments and disciplines are negotiating the practicalities and epistemological and ethical implications of messy ethnographic practice as a means of researching messy social realities. Law notes that social science investigations interfere with the world; things change as a result. The issue then is not to seek disengagement but rather with how to engage. ibid p14. Drawing on their own situated experiences, the book's contributors address the messy implications of this and also explore the equally messy issue of why engage. They reflect on the process of undertaking research and their role in the research process as they negotiate their own position in the field. What is ethnography for? What impact should or do we have in the field and after we leave the research site? What about unintended consequences? When if ever are we off duty? What does informed consent mean in a constantly shifting dynamic ethnographic context? Is ethnography by its very nature a form of action research? By providing a wide range of situated explorations of messy ethnographies, the book presents a unique hands on guide to the challenges of negotiating ethnography in practice which will be of use to all researchers and practitioners who use ethnography as a method.
