Bennett,2015-12-04 How global forest management shifted from an integrated conservation model to a bifurcated system of timber plantations and protected areas Today the world's forests are threatened by global warming growing demand for wood products and increasing pressure to clear tropical forests for agricultural use Economic globalization has enabled Western corporations to export timber processing jobs and import cheap wood products from developing countries Timber plantations of exotic fast growing species supply an ever larger amount of the world's wood In response many countries have established forest areas protected from development In this book Brett Bennett views today's forestry issues from a historical perspective The separation of wood production from the protection of forests he shows stems from entangled environmental social political and economic factors This divergence driven by the concomitant intensification of production and creation of vast protected areas is reshaping forest management systems both public and private Bennett shows that plantations and protected areas evolved from and then undermined an earlier integrated forest management system that sought both to produce timber and to conserve the environment He describes the development of the science and profession of forestry in eighteenth and nineteenth century Europe discusses the twentieth century creation of timber plantations in the Americas Asia Africa and Australia and examines the controversies over deforestation that led to the establishment of protected areas Bennett argues that the problems associated with the bifurcation of forest management including the loss of forestry knowledge necessary to manage large ecosystems for diverse purposes suggest that a more integrated model would be preferable

Forest Service, 1933      Sustainable Forest Management in a Changing World: a European Perspective Peter Spathelf, 2009-12-04 Yet another book on the topic of Sustainable Forest Management can only be justified by new information that is of direct relevance. The contents of this volume concentrate on the very latest factors and developments thus hopefully contributing both to the book's attractiveness and to closing gaps in the discipline's database. This book is written for researchers in the field of forest management, international forestry and climate change related issues, legal and policy advisors as well as for managers of private companies who deal with SFM. The authors of the various sections are scientists in the field of forestry and other environmental sciences. They represent different institutions, mainly universities and research agencies in Germany but also high level international institutions in development co-operation such as the World Bank, FAO and IIASA. The scope of the book is to refresh the meanings and perceptions of SFM against the background of the rapid changes in our natural and social environment. Climate change and the rapid increase of atmospheric CO<sub>2</sub> concentration is a global process with negative impacts of different kinds among others on natural ecosystems such as forests. A crucial issue therefore is how forest management can contribute to forest conservation in light of changing climatic conditions Moreover policy changes such as the introduction of certification schemes and the new emphasis laid on Non Wood Forest Products justify the re evaluation of the role of SFM in delivering ecological goods and services from our forests Forest Resource Report United States.
