Interventions for Improving Adaptive Behaviors in Children With Autism Spectrum Disorders Syriopoulou-Delli, Christine K., Folostina, Ruxandra, 2021-09-03 Millions of children have been diagnosed with autism or fall somewhere within the autism spectrum Early intervention education and training programs have been found to support these students immensely leading to a higher level of independent social life than has previously been seen. Anxiety, bullying, communication and learning abstract concepts can be a great challenge for autistic children and can also provide an obstacle for social interaction with other children. It is important to continue offering these students access to a broad, enriched and balanced curriculum while also devising new approaches and alternative systems of communication that will help to facilitate their access to the educational process and foster adaptive behaviors.

Interventions for Improving Adaptive Behaviors in Children With Autism Spectrum Disorders offers a current overview of modern practices regarding the teaching of autistic children. This book seeks to update the current practices for professionals working with autistic children, offer practical information regarding interventions and provide tools for managing autistic children in critical situations. Covering topics such as autism diagnostic observation schedule, inclusivity in schools and vocational training for autistic people, this text is essential for teachers, special education teachers, administrators, speech therapists, academicians, researchers, students and professionals and practitioners involved in the upbringing, education, social and vocational inclusion of people with ASD.

National Library of Medicine Current Catalog National Library of Medicine (U.S.), Community Mental Health Steve Morgan, 2013-12-20. The client group referred to as the long term mentally ill, the persistently severely mentally distressed, the chronically psychotic, ill or people with long term mental health problems have generally received a poor deal from the traditional psychiatric services. Help has largely rested on custodial and medical treatments. The main focus of rehabilitative approaches has often been dictated by predetermined expectations which are usually set quite low. The assumption is often made that people in this client group are treatment resistant and unlikely to make good use of opportunities to develop personal skills towards restructuring their lives. Though the emphasis of treatment has often followed medical approaches and many non medical people have sought to lay blame on the medical model as characterized by diagnosis and medical treatments, it would be wrong and greatly over generalized to follow this line of criticism entirely. In reality, some psychiatrists have been the pioneers and advocates of the diversity of approaches to community support, medical and non medical. It is they who have often supported the development of other professionals and non professionals and who often lead the pioneering efforts of research into methods of treatment and support.
