Making A Community Work:

The Making of Community Work David N. Thomas, 2024-11-01 Originally published in 1983 The Making of Community Work is the outcome of a two year study of community work in the United Kingdom The main purpose of the study was to review the development of community work and to suggest some of the issues in practice and training that might be important in the 1980s Much of the first part of the book is taken up with the emergence of community work as an occupation David Thomas tries to clarify its contribution to a number of political and social processes and to define community work in a way which distinguishes it from other kinds of interventions The second part of the book deals with training research literature and employment in community work it includes a review of college and field based training opportunities and a critical discussion of the state of theory and ideology in the occupation It was hoped it would be an important source of ideas and inspiration for the years ahead It was the first major review of community work since its re discovery in the 1960s it will still be of interest to all those involved in community work or wishing to understand its influence on other professions The book was intended for fieldworkers administrators policy makers trainers and students in community work and in related occupations and disciplines Thomas presents his ideas clearly and his ability to look critically at some of the basic assumptions in community work makes for stimulating and enjoyable reading Making Community Design Work Umut Toker, 2017-11-08 Since the earliest settlements people have deliberated the issues that affect their future together Making Community Design Work shows how planners can guide the process toward effective decision making and beneficial community design This well crafted book distills decades of community design experience into a sound conceptual framework of value to practicing planners as well as planning students Umut Toker covers a broad range of planning scales and introduces field tested tools for participatory decision making at regional city community and site specific levels To succeed any planning project must address both the physical space and its users From setting goals to evaluating results Making Community Design Work helps planners navigate the process of creating environments that meet the needs of the people they serve Community Building: What Makes It Work Paul W Mattessich., Wilder Research Center, 1997-06-15 This practical guide shows you what really does and doesn t contribute to community building success It reveals 28 keys to help you build community more effectively and efficiently You won t find another single report that pulls out common lessons from across community building initiatives about what works You can use this report to find out what community characteristics contribute to successful community building make sure key processes such as communications and technical assistance are in place determine if community leaders or organizers have essential qualities such as a relationship of trust and flexibility and evaluate the likely success of a proposed project or get a struggling effort back on track Examples definitions and a detailed bibliography make this report even more valuable Wilder Research Center scoured the literature contacted resource centers and spoke with community development experts across the country The result is concrete understandable research based on real life experiences The 28 factors in this report are grouped by 1 characteristics of the community 2 characteristics of the community building process and 3 characteristics of community building organizers Detailed descriptions and case examples of how each factor plays out are followed by practical questions you can use to assess your work In addition to the factors you also get working definitions for community community building and many other terms a list of resources and contacts in the field an explanation of how the research was done and a complete bibliography of all the studies used in this report Now you can save time looking for best practice information With this concise report you ve got the tools to help your community building work succeed

Community Gardening in an Unlikely City Tyler Schafer,2020-12-10 Community gardening is as much about community as it is gardening and compared to growing plants cultivating community is far more difficult In Community Gardening in an Unlikely City The Struggle to Grow Together in Las Vegas Schafer documents his time as a member of a fledgling Las Vegas community garden and the process through which a rotating group of gardeners try to forge community He demonstrates the ways in which choices gardeners make about what goals to pursue or who belongs or what story to tell about their collective efforts influence how they and others experience and interpret the garden The garden culture that emerges over time shapes how or whether community is practiced at the garden and has important consequences for the gardeners abilities to connect with the low income Black and Latinx community in which it is located Schafer s analysis provides important insights about urban culture the environment and food justice in the American Southwest and a sober look into the often messy process and practice of community

James, Audrey Kobayashi, Peter Li, Howard Ramos, Malinda S. Smith, 2017-06-22 The university is often regarded as a bastion of liberal democracy where equity and diversity are promoted and racism doesn't exist. In reality the university still excludes many people and is a site of racialization that is subtle complex and sophisticated. While some studies do point to the persistence of systemic barriers to equity in higher education in depth analyses of racism racialization and Indigeneity in the academy are more notable for excluding racialized and Indigenous professors. This book is the first comprehensive data based study of racialized and Indigenous faculty members experiences in Canadian universities. Challenging the myth of equity in higher education it brings together leading scholars who scrutinize what universities have done and question the effectiveness of their equity programs. They draw on a rich body of survey data interviews and analysis of universities stated policies to examine the experiences of racialized faculty members across Canada who despite diversity initiatives in their respective institutions have yet to see meaningful changes in everyday working conditions. They also make important recommendations as to how universities can address racialization and fulfill the promise of equity in higher education.

Embracing the Track of Phrase: An Emotional Symphony within Making A Community Work

In some sort of taken by displays and the ceaseless chatter of instantaneous transmission, the melodic splendor and psychological symphony produced by the published term usually diminish into the background, eclipsed by the constant noise and interruptions that permeate our lives. Nevertheless, set within the pages of Making A Community Work a stunning literary prize overflowing with natural thoughts, lies an immersive symphony waiting to be embraced. Constructed by a masterful composer of language, this captivating masterpiece conducts viewers on a mental journey, well unraveling the concealed tunes and profound impact resonating within each cautiously constructed phrase. Within the depths of this emotional examination, we can examine the book's main harmonies, analyze its enthralling publishing model, and surrender ourselves to the profound resonance that echoes in the depths of readers' souls.
