Repertoires Andreas Gebesmair, 2017-07-05 With just four record companies controlling nearly 80 per cent of the world market in popular music issues of globalization are evidently significant to our understanding of how and why popular music is made and distributed As transnational industries seek to open up increasingly larger markets the question of how local and regional music cultures can be sustained is a pressing one To what extent does the global music market offer opportunities for the worldwide dissemination of local music within and beyond the major industry The essays in this volume examine the structure and strategies of the transnational music industry with its deployment of mass communication technologies including sound carriers satellite broadcasting and the Internet The book also explores local and individual experience of global music and this music's dissemination through migration and communities of interest as well as the ideological and political use of different kinds of music In contrast to recent arguments which posit an American imperialist dominance of popular music the contributors to this volume find that the global repertoire of the major labels no longer represents the culture of a certain country but is fed by different sources The essays here discuss how we can characterize this vast de centered industry and offer perspectives on the so called international repertoire that calls for a melodic structure ballad forms unaccented vocalisation and an image that has global recognition Cancer Immunotherapy and
