Department of Agricultural and Resource Economics, 2008 The Governance of Rangelands Pedro M. Herrera, Jonathan Davies, Pablo Manzano Baena, 2014-10-10 Rangelands are large natural landscapes that can include grasslands shrublands savannahs and woodlands They are greatly influenced by and often dependent on the action of herbivores In the majority of rangelands the dominant herbivores are found in domestic herds that are managed by mobile pastoralists Most pastoralists manage their rangelands communally benefitting from the greater flexibility and seasonal resource access that common property regimes can offer As this book shows this creates a major challenge for governance and institutions This work improves our understanding of the importance of governance how it can be strengthened and the principles that underpin good governance in order to prevent degradation of rangelands and ensure their sustainability. It describes the nature of governance at different levels: community governance, state governance, international governance, and the unique features of rangelands that demand collective action. Issues of scale, ecological disequilibrium, and seasonality are addressed. A series of country case studies is presented, drawn from a wide spectrum of examples from Africa, the Middle East, Central Asia, Europe, and North America. These provide contrasting lessons which are summarised to promote improved governance of rangelands and pastoralist livelihoods.

Wild Rangelands Johan T. du Toit, Richard Kock, James Deutsch, 2010-01-26. Rangeland ecosystems which include unimproved grasslands, shrublands, savannas, and semi-deserts support half of the world's livestock while also providing habitats for some of the most charismatic of wildlife species. This book examines the pressures on rangeland ecosystems worldwide from human land use, over-hunting, and subsistence and commercial farming of livestock and crops. Leading experts have pooled their experiences from all continents to cover the ecological, sociological, political, veterinary, and economic aspects of rangeland management today. This book provides practitioners and students of rangeland management and wildland conservation with a diversity of perspectives on a central question: can rangelands be wildlands? The first book to examine rangelands from a conservation perspective, it emphasizes the balance between the needs of people and livestock and wildlife. Written by an international team of experts covering all geographical regions, it examines ecological, sociological, political, veterinary, and economic aspects of rangeland management and wildland conservation, providing a diversity of perspectives not seen before in a single volume.

This book, reporting the findings and recommendations of the NAS committee, contains over eighty professional papers presented at workshops designed to assess forage allocation, inventory of rangeland resources, impact of grazing intensity, and specialized grazing systems on the use and value of rangeland. It covers manipulative range improvements, application of socioeconomic techniques to range management, decision making, and political and legal aspects of range management.
