The Facts

Where can I have a pathology test?

Pathology tests can be performed at the place of collection and/or transported to a pathology laboratory, which should be accredited, for processing. Here is a snapshot of places to have a pathology test, including some points to consider.

Did you know?

Consumers may perform some simple pathology tests themselves using kits approved for sale in Australia by the Therapeutic Goods Administration (TGA). Even though these test systems are relatively simple and reliable, problems may occur such as incorrectly interpreting a result from a home glucose-monitoring kit or pregnancy test kit.

What is an accredited pathology laboratory?

The National Association of Testing Authorities (NATA) and the Royal College of Pathologists of Australasia (RCPA) jointly perform an accreditation assessment of pathology laboratories seeking approval as an Approved Pathology Laboratory. Accreditation is performed against quality standards defined by the National Pathology Accreditation Advisory Council (NPAAC) which is a ministerially-appointed expert body that develops and maintains the standards for accreditation of pathology laboratories.

How do you know if a pathology laboratory is accredited?

Look for the NATA/RCPA logos or endorsement certificates, or ask the laboratory staff if they have NATA/RCPA accreditation. Patients can also refer to the NATA website www.nata.com.au which lists all Medical Testing laboratories currently accredited in Australia.

Did you know?

NATA/RCPA accreditation is only compulsory for pathology laboratories that provide Medicare-eligible services.

Approved Pathology Collection Centres (APCCs)

APCCs are the facilities to which patients take their pathology request form to have their pathology specimen or sample collected for testing in the pathology laboratory. They are linked to accredited pathology laboratories and are subject to ongoing monitoring processes to ensure the quality of pathology collection services.

Medical consulting rooms

Treating practitioners routinely collect pathology specimens, such as Pap smears or wound swabs, as part of their consultation. Most pathology tests collected by treating practitioners are sent to an accredited pathology laboratory for testing.
