Legends of the Earth Dorothy B. Vitaliano,1973 The slower geologic processes are represented by myths associated with natural landforms rocks and minerals rivers and mountains and other outstanding features of the landscape Examples are also given to show some minor ways in which folklore and geology impinge on one another misconceptions about geologic phenomena such as earthquakes which are so prevalent as to constitute a form of modern folklore and conversely ideas long considered to be pure folklore which may prove to have some basis in scientific fact The most dramatic example of geomythology so far discovered is the theory the origin of the lost continent of Atlantis may be found in the Minoan civilization of Crete which suddenly disappeared from view around 1450 B C about the time of a tremendous eruption know to have occurred in the nearby volcano Santorin This theory variously developed by Marinatos and Galanopoulos is examined in the light of new evidence gathered in Crete by Mrs

The New New Zealand William Edward Moneyhun,2020-01-09 Today s New Zealand is an emerging paradigm for successful cultural relations Although the nation s Maori indigenous Polynesian and Pakeha colonial European populations of the 19th century were dramatically different and often at odds they are today co contributors to a vibrant society For more than a century they have been working out the kind of nation that engenders respect and well being and their interaction though often riddled with confrontation is finally bearing bicultural fruit By their model the encounter of diverse cultures does not require the surrender of one to the other rather it entails each expanding its own cultural categories in the light of the other The time is ripe to explore modern New Zealand s cultural dynamics for what we can learn about getting along The present anthropological work focuses on religion and related symbols forms of reciprocity the operation of power and the concept of culture in modern New Zealand society
