criticized the uses of mathematics in economics yet this has not in any way diminished the significance of mathematics in economics.

Mathematics for economists is subdivided into I and II. While the first aspect is covered in Mathematics for Economists I (ECO 205), the second aspect is to be covered in the second semester, Mathematics for Economists II (ECO 208). This course will not only be taught in abstracts but practical applications to the field of economics will also be adequately
