Everywhere and Nowhere Mark Vareschi, 2018-12-11 A fascinating analysis of anonymous publication centuries before the digital age Everywhere and Nowhere considers the ubiquity of anonymity and mediation in the publication and circulation of eighteenth century British literature before the Romantic creation of the author and what this means for literary criticism Anonymous authorship was typical of the time yet literary scholars and historians have been generally unable to account for it as anything more than a footnote or curiosity Mark Vareschi shows the entangled relationship between mediation and anonymity revealing the nonhuman agency of the printed text Drawing richly on quantitative analysis and robust archival work Vareschi brings together philosophy literary theory and media theory in a trenchant analysis uncovering a history of textual engagement and interpretation that does not hinge on the known authorial subject In discussing anonymous poetry drama and the novel along with anonymously published writers such as Daniel Defoe Frances Burney and Walter Scott he unveils a theory of mediation that renews broader questions about agency and intention Vareschi argues that textual intentionality is a property of nonhuman material media rather than human subjects alone allowing the anonymous literature of the eighteenth century to speak to contemporary questions of meaning in the philosophy of language Vareschi closes by exploring dubious claims about the death of anonymity and the reexplosion of anonymity with the coming of the digital Ultimately Everywhere and Nowhere reveals the long history of print anonymity so central to the risks and benefits of the digital culture

De-/Re-Contextualizing Conference Interpreting Ebru Diriker, 2004-08-26 This groundbreaking study explores Simultaneous Conference Interpreting SI by focusing on interpreters as professionals working in socio cultural contexts and on the interdependency between these contexts and actual SI behavior While previous research on SI has been dominated by cognitive and psycholinguistic approaches Diriker's work explores SI in relation to the broader and more immediate socio cultural contexts by investigating the representation of the professional in the meta discourse and by exploring the presence of interpreters and the nature of the interpreted utterance at an actual conference Making use of participant observations interviews and analysis of conference transcripts Diriker challenges some of the widely held assumptions about SI She suggests that the interpreter's delivery represents not only the speaker but a multiplicity of speaker positions and that this multiplicity may well be a source of tension or vulnerability as well as strength for interpreters Her analysis also highlights how interpreters negotiate meaning in SI and underscores the need for more concerted efforts to explore SI in authentic contexts
