Military Recruiting in High Schools Brian W. Lagotte, 2016-07-08 This book focuses exclusively on specific education policy instead of general military recruiting in high schools When the George W Bush administration passed its landmark education legislation in 2001 dubbed the No Child Left Behind Act legislators included a small section containing strict military recruiting mandates for public high schools The law had two main provisions First a data sharing provision requires high schools to distribute the personal directory information of every student to all local armed forces recruiting stations on an annual basis Second the equal access provision requires high schools to provide military recruiters access to school grounds equal to university recruiters or career recruiters For accountability if these provisions are not fulfilled the school will lose all federal education funds Students or parents may opt out of the data collection through a bureaucratic process but no such opt out option exists for the soldiers visiting schools When President Barack Obama renewed the omnibus education law in 2015 the name changed to the Every Student Succeeds Act but the military mandates remained the provisions were strengthened by including a passage prohibiting any local school board from instituting an opt in bureaucratic structure for parents and students This book focuses on how the two provisions have been met by parents school staff soldiers and other individuals influenced by high school education policy and military recruiting The central question is do military recruiting methods utilized in public high schools work to promote the best interests of the students or should policy makers rethink the freedom adult soldiers have when interacting with children within schools
