WITCHES IN AFRICA

Abstract

The question whether justice can be completely detached from morality seems to be relevant to the discussion of the issues that surround the execution of witches in Africa. In spite of the widespread belief in witchcraft in African societies, it is apparent that part of the West as well as the Judeo-Christian traditions also support this view. However, this does not remove the fact that, there are thousands of individuals who are still sceptical about such belief. This paper agrees with the view of those who believe the existence of witchcraft. Thus, despite the fact that many scholars have written on the existence of witchcraft in Africa, little or no attention has been paid to the question of moral implications of executing witches in Africa. An attempt to fill this gap facilitates an investigation into the nexus between morality and social justice. The fundamental problem now is, is it morally right to kill? Should witches be killed? If witches should be executed, are there moral and legal bases for such killing? How should we account for the question of sanctity of human life? In this paper, effort shall be made to answer these fundamental questions. The methods employed in this research are critical analysis, philosophical argumentation and conceptual clarification.

Keywords: witchcraft, morality, law, society, justice, religion

Introduction

Discussion on witchcraft as a theme under the metaphysical thinking in Africa is not a novel one. Several scholars, both African and non-African have contributed immensely to the question of the ontological reality of witchcraft. The debate is majorly between two camps. That is, between those who believe in the reality of witches and those who are sceptical about such a paranormal phenomenon. While scholar such as J. B. Rhine has scientifically proved, through his ESP (extra sensory perception theory), the reality of spiritual phenomena in the category of which the practice of witchcraft falls, Albert Mosley is also of the view that the notion of spirits, souls, ancestors, divinities and to add, witchcraft are not less legitimate than notions about germs, genes, electrons and neutrons (MOSLEY 1978, 3). Having considered the debate over the ontological status of witchcraft, Sophie Oluwole (1978) in her own view provided justifications to supporting the reality of such a practice in Africa. However, Peter Bodurin in his analysis submitted a sceptical view that the evidence offered for the existence of psi abilities (witchcraft inclusive) is not conclusive and that the explanation offered for such phenomena is not satisfactory.

attribute as much importance to the Second World War and its memory as Britain arguably nowhere else has this conflict developed such longevity in cultural memory and retained such presence in contemporary culture Long Shadows is about how literature and film have helped shape this process in Britain More precisely the essays collected here suggest that this is a continuous work in progress subject to transgenerational revisions political expediencies commercial considerations and the vicissitudes of popular taste It would indeed be more accurate to speak of the meanings plural that the war has been given at various moments in British cultural life These semantic variations and fluctuations in cultural import are rooted in the specificity of the British war experience in the political aftermath of the war in Europe and in its significance for Britain's postwar position on the global stage In other words the books and films discussed in these essays respond to how the war has been interpreted and remembered what is at stake is the way in which the war has been emplotted as a hegemonic cultural narrative about Britain The fictions of Arthur Cravan Dafydd Jones, 2019-02-18 The first comprehensive English language account and critical reading of the legendary poet and boxer Arthur Cravan a fleeting figure on the periphery of early

Responses to the Trauma of the French Revolution Katherine Astbury, 2017-07-05 During the French Revolution traditional literary forms such as the sentimental novel and the moral tale dominate literary production At first glance it might seem that these texts are unaffected by the upheavals in France in fact they reveal not only a surprising engagement with politics but also an internalised emotional response to the turbulence of the period In this innovative and wide ranging study Katherine Astbury uses trauma theory as a way of exploring the apparent contradiction between the proliferation of non political literary texts and the events of the Revolution Through the narratives of established bestselling literary figures of the Ancien Regime primarily Marmontel Madame de Genlis and Florian and the early works of first generation Romantics Madame de Stael and Chateaubriand she traces how the Revolution shapes their writing providing an intriguing new angle on cultural production of the 1790s Katherine Astbury is Senior Lecturer in French Studies at the University of Warwick

The Metamorphoses of Don Juan's Women Ann Davies, 2004 While many scholars have approached Don Juan in terms of myth this study argues for the understanding of Don Juan as a discourse of gender relations changing over time Using examples from the plays by Tirso de Molina Moliere Mozart Zorrilla Shaw and Frisch it argues that Don Juan's entire identity as a male individual is constructed around women but that over time reflecting a growing sense of crisis in the male individual the women appear more and more pathological in their desire for Don Juan In contrast with early modern works where women fend for themselves in a positive manner the heroines of later Don Juan works actively prey on the individual male This book argues that these changes in approach to the female characters and in tandem the developing identity of the male protagonist suggest Don Juan as dischronic discourse rather than myth
