Mapping Vulnerability Greg Bankoff, Georg Frerks, Dorothea Hilhorst, 2013-06-17 Raging floods massive storms and cataclysmic earthquakes every year up to 340 million people are affected by these and other disasters which cause loss of life and damage to personal property agriculture and infrastructure So what can be done The key to understanding the causes of disasters and mitigating their impacts is the concept of vulnerability Mapping Vulnerability analyses vulnerability as a concept central to the way we understand disasters and their magnitude and impact Written and edited by a distinguished group of disaster scholars and practitioners this book is a counterbalance to those technocratic approaches that limit themselves to simply looking at disasters as natural phenomena Through the notion of vulnerability the authors stress the importance of social processes and human environmental interactions as causal agents in the making of disasters They critically examine what renders communities unsafe a condition they argue that depends primarily on the relative position of advantage or disadvantage that a particular group occupies within a society's social order The book also looks at vulnerability in terms of its relationship to development and its impact on people's lives through consideration of selected case studies drawn from Africa Asia and Latin America Mapping Vulnerability is essential reading for academics students policymakers and practitioners in disaster studies geography development studies economics environmental studies and sociology

RISK21 - Coping with Risks due to Natural Hazards in the 21st Century Walter J. Ammann, Stefanie Dannenmann, Laurent Vulliet, 2006-08-17 Over the last two decades there has been an increase in the number of natural hazards which have culminated in catastrophic consequences severely impacting on people and livelihoods In response to this escalation the Swiss Natural Hazards Competence Centre CENAT organized a workshop entitled RISK21 at the Centro Stefano Franscini Mon

Natural Hazards and Disaster Risk Reduction Carina Fearnley, Emily Wilkinson, Catherine J. Tillyard, Stephen J. Edwards, 2016-04-08 Building upon presentations given during the conference on Disaster Risk Reduction for Natural Hazards Putting Research into Practice held at University College London in November 2009 the articles collected in this book examine how natural hazards research is accessed and used by practitioners and decision makers and conversely how policy and practice inform research As with the conference this book successfully brings together views from humanitarian and development agencies academia business government and funding bodies It is rare to engage such a wide range of sectors in a discussion relating to the issues of disaster risk reduction from a natural hazards perspective and the book captures this interaction and the resultant exchange of ideas thus providing an insight into how stakeholders respectively undertake or engage with natural hazards research Collectively the articles highlight the need for greater dialogue understanding and collaboration between all these sectors if research is to be made relevant and generate significant impact on risk reduction policy and practice There is an urgent requirement to better understand the respective needs ways of working project timescales and funding mechanisms for disaster risk reduction as well as the challenges posed by institutional and organizational structures and functions These issues must be overcome to ensure that ultimately and most significantly discussions turn into positive practical actions so that research on natural hazards is relevant and applicable The book represents a step in that journey This book was published as a special issue of Environmental Hazards

Natural Hazards in El Salvador William Ingersoll Rose,2004 Smart Cities as a Solution for Reducing Urban Waste and Pollution Hua, Goh Bee,2016-06-20 The exponential growth of urban settings has led to an increase in pollutants and waste management issues around the world As the environment continues to falter under the weight of these pressing issues it has become increasingly imperative to develop new technologies and methodologies that have the potential to improve the overall sustainability and cleanliness of these cities Smart Cities as a Solution for Reducing Urban Waste and Pollution examines emergent research on smart innovations within built urban environments Featuring best practices and theoretical frameworks as well as potential issues in the implementation of smart and green technology in urban settings this publication is a vital reference source for graduate students researchers academics engineers architects facility managers and government officials

GIS for Emergency Preparedness and Health Risk Reduction David J. Briggs,Pip Forer,Lars Järup,Richard Stern,2012-12-06 Geographical Information Systems GIS have developed rapidly in recent years and now provide powerful tools for the capture manipulation integration interrogation modelling analysis and visualisation of data tools that are already used for policy support in a wide range of areas at almost all geographic and administrative levels This holds especially for emergency preparedness and health risk reduction which are all essentially spatial problems To date however many initiatives have remained disconnected and uncoordinated leading to less powerful less compatible and less widely implemented systems than might otherwise have been the case The important matters discussed here include the probabilistic nature of most environmental hazards and the semi random factors that influence interactions between these and human exposures the effects of temporal and spatial scales on hazard assessment and imputed risk the effects of measurement error in risk estimation and the stratification of risks and their impacts according to socioeconomic characteristics and the quantification of socioeconomic differences in vulnerability and susceptibility to environmental hazards
