On July 4, 1776, while the colonies were still at war with Great Britain, the 2nd Continental Congress convened in Philadelphia and adopted the United States Declaration of Independence. This document, written mostly by Thomas Jefferson, declared that the 13 American colonies would no longer be a part of the British Empire. It affirmed "that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness."

The Declaration listed many, many grievances against Great Britain and its king, King George III and affirmed "...that as free and Independent States, they have full Power to lay this combined Paper, manifest Grievances, declare Sentiments, and to do all the other Acts and Things which Independent States may have the right to do."
