Our War And How We Won It:

How We Won and Lost the War in Afghanistan Douglas Grindle, 2017-11-01 Douglas Grindle provides a firsthand account of how the war in Afghanistan was won in a rural district south of Kandahar City and how the newly created peace slipped away when vital resources failed to materialize and the United States headed for the exit. By placing the reader at the heart of the American counterinsurgency effort, Grindle reveals little known incidents including the failure of expensive aid programs to target local needs, the slow throttling of local government as official funds failed to reach the districts, and the United States' inexplicable failure to empower the Afghan local officials even after they succeeded in bringing the people onto their side. Grindle presents the side of the hard working Afghans who won the war and expresses what they really thought of the U.S. military and its decisions. Written by a former field officer for the U.S. Agency for International Development, this story of dashed hopes and missed opportunities details how America's desire to leave the war behind ultimately overshadowed its desire to sustain victory. Our War Too Margaret Paton-Walsh, 2002 In the late 1930s a number of American women, especially those allied with various peace and isolationist groups, protested against the nation's entry into World War II. While their story is fairly well known, Margaret Paton Walsh reveals a far less familiar story of women who fervently felt that American intervention was absolutely necessary. Paton Walsh recounts how the United States became involved in the war but does so through the eyes of American women who faced it as a necessary evil. Covering the period between 1935 and 1941, she examines how these women functioned as political actors even though they were excluded from positions of power through activism in women's organizations, informal women's networks, and even male-dominated lobbying groups. In the Great Debate over whether America should enter the war, some women favored aid to the Allies not because they hoped for war but because they hoped aid would forestall more direct U.S. involvement but also because they believed war was preferable to a Nazi victory. Paton Walsh shows that this activism involved some of the most prominent women of their day. Elizabeth Cutter Morrow, whose son-in-law Charles Lindbergh was an isolationist spokesman, supported the revision of the Neutrality Acts to allow the sale of arms to the Allies and expressed her support in a national radio broadcast. Soon other women joined this debate. Esther Brunauer of the AAUW, journalist Dorothy Thompson, and organizations like the League of Women Voters and National Women's Trade Union League broke from the pacifist tradition to advocate American aid for the Allied cause. Focusing on the conflict in Europe, Paton Walsh shows how these women grasped the implications of the Lend Lease program for America's entry into the war but supported it nevertheless. By late 1941 the Women's Division of the Fight for Freedom Committee had been established, no longer merely advocating aid to Britain to keep American boys out of battle; this organization supported direct American involvement in the war as a means of stopping Nazi oppression. While most historians have focused on women's pacifism, Paton Walsh connects women more directly to world events and shows how those interventionists reformulated maternalist ideas to justify and explain their beliefs. Our War Too is a story of

American women trying to reconcile the irreconcilable to preserve both their principles and their peace It expands our understanding of women as political actors and thinkers about foreign policy as it sheds new light on American public opinion over the build up to the war

Rethinking Our War on Drugs Gary L. Fisher,2006-09-30 The National Drug Control Policy has failed its two major functions supply reduction and demand reduction due to faulty assumptions regarding nearly every aspect of the alcohol and drug fields charges author Fisher Yet in spite of overwhelming evidence of this failure policy makers have strongly resisted discussing major changes to the assumptions that underly current policy because of political pressure bias and philosophical intransigence he adds Fisher discusses controversial topics and defends uncommon approaches in chapters focused on subjects including legalization harm reduction the futility of supply reduction the problem of underage drinking and effectiveness of treatment and prevention He proposes a new national policy for drug control including elimination of the war metaphor inclusion of alcohol in the mandate conceptualization of addiction as a public health problem utilization of harm reduction principles to guide policy and discontinuation of approaches that isolate drug and alcohol problems from their connection to broader social issues such as poverty In this work the premises of the current National Drug Control Strategy are challenged and both Democratic and Republican administrations across the last 10 years are critically examined Statements of the Director of the Office of National Drug Control Strategy are critiqued Major points include that there is no evidence the NDCS has achieved any of its goals that harm reduction should be its guiding principle and supply reduction should not be part of the national strategy
