Beyranevand,2021-02-15 How to build productive relationships in math education I wasn t taught this way I can t help my child These are common refrains from today s parents and guardians who are often overwhelmed confused worried and frustrated about how to best support their children with what they see as the new math The problem has been compounded by the shift to more distance learning in response to a global pandemic Partnering With Parents in Elementary School Math provides educators with long overdue guidance on how to productively partner and communicate with families about their children's mathematics learning. It includes reproducible surveys, letters, and planning documents that can be used to improve the home-school relationship, which in turn helps students, parents, teachers, and education leaders alike. Readers will find guidance on how to understand and empathize with what fuels parents' anxieties and concerns. Align as a school and set parents' expectations about what math instruction their children will experience and how it will help them. Communicate clearly and productively with parents about their students' progress, strengths, and needs in math. Run informative and fun family events to support homework. Coach parents to portray a productive disposition about math in front of their children. Educators, families, and students are best served when proactive, productive, and healthy relationships have been developed with each other and with the realities of today's math education. This guide shows how these relationships can be built.

Challenge-Based Learning in the School Library Makerspace Colleen Graves, Aaron Graves, Diana L. Rendina, 2017-07-19 An invaluable how-to text that details the workshop model, addresses the design challenges, and explains the best avenues for curriculum-based learning in the school library makerspace. A successful school makerspace needs an enthusiastic maker community, school-wide participation, and staff support. How do you build this type of learning at your school? The innovative team behind Challenge-Based Learning in the School Library Makerspace addresses common questions and concerns and describes step-by-step how to introduce challenge-based learning into the school library makerspace. Intended for librarians and school staff who have already started thinking in terms of makerspaces but need further help sustaining programming and want to know more about Makerspace 2.0, this helpful guide details the workshop model, various real-world design challenges, and the process for implementing curriculum-based learning in the school library makerspace. Readers will be empowered to go beyond the initial implementation of a makerspace and to draw from an arsenal of proven methodologies for designing challenges for student learning. Additionally, the book enables the addition of curriculum connections to library programming, shows how to connect your students to local experts and the global maker community, and eases you into more productive collaboration with other librarians.

Technology in Schools Kevin P. Brady, 2012-08-14 Education of America's school children always has been and always will be a hot-button issue. From what should be taught to how to pay for education to how to keep kids safe in schools, impassioned debates emerge and mushroom both within the scholarly community and among the general public. This volume in the point-counterpoint Debating Issues in American Education reference series tackles the topic of technology in schools. Fifteen to twenty chapters explore such varied issues as the digital divide, electronic textbooks, impacts on curricula, privacy on school computers, web censorship, and more. Each chapter opens with an introductory essay by the volume editor, followed by point-counterpoint articles written and signed by invited experts, and concludes with Further Readings and Resources, thus providing readers with views on multiple sides of technology issues within America's schools and pointing them toward more in-depth resources for further exploration.
