Citizenship and Immigration in Postwar Britain Randall Hansen, 2000-06-01 In this contentious and ground breaking study the author draws on extensive archival research to provide a new account of the transformation of the United Kingdom into a multicultural society through an analysis of the evolution of immigration and citizenship policy since 1945 Against the prevailing academic orthodoxy he argues that British immigration policy was not racist but both rational and liberal In this ground breaking book the author draws extensively on archival material and theoretical advances in the social science literature Citizenship and Immigration in Post war Britain examines the transformation since 1945 of the UK from a homogeneous into a multicultural society Rejecting a dominant strain of sociological and historical inquiry emphasizing state racism Hansen argues that politicians and civil servants were overall liberal relative to the public to which they owed their office and that they pursued policies that were rational for any liberal democratic politician He explains the trajectory of British migration and nationality policy its exceptional liberality in the 1950s its restrictiveness after then and its tortured and seemingly racist definition of citizenship The combined effect of a 1948 imperial definition of citizenship adopted independently of immigration and a primary commitment to migration from the Old Dominions locked British politicians into a series of policy choices resulting in a migration and nationality regime that was not racist in intention but was racist in effect In the context of a liberal elite and an illiberal public Britain s current restrictive migration policies result not from the failing of its policy makers but from those of its institutions

The Dynamics Of Race And Gender Haleh Afshar, Mary Maynard, 2012-10-12

During the past decade feminism and women's studies have been forced to acknowledge the diversities of women's experiences as well as the patriarchal oppression that they share. The emphasis on difference has shattered the illusion of homogeneity and sisterhood which previously characterized white middle class Westernized feminist politics and analysis. There is relatively little work which concentrates on the interrelationships of race and gender in general and the consequences of racism for women of different backgrounds in particular. The Dynamics of Race and Gender aims to contribute to the debate and understanding in this area. Emphasis has been given to age, class, disability, race and sexuality. The contributors to this volume are from different religious, cultural and ethnic backgrounds giving a balanced and broad ranging perspective on this important social question. Organized around three main themes which are issues of theory and method, questions of identity, racism and sexism at work, the chapters of this book indicate how the processes of race and gender interrelate in highly complex and contradictory ways. Demonstrating the benefits to be gained from analysing the interplay of various axes of differentiation in specific empirical and historical locations and in doing so under scoring the point that diversity among women cannot be seen as a static phenomenon.
