 Collaborative Ethnographic Working in Mental Health Neil Armstrong,2023-12-07 Collaborative Ethnographic Working in Mental Health seeks to chart a new direction for research into mental healthcare with the aim of creating the conditions for more productive interdisciplinary dialogue People involved in mental health often fail to recognise how they are described by researchers from the humanities and social sciences which inhibits productive collaboration This book seeks to address this problem by including clinicians and patients in the research process and by shifting attention away from power and knowledge and towards the organisational context It explores how clinical thinking and behaviour illness experience and clinical relationships are all shaped by the bureaucratic context In particular it examines tensions between what we want from mental healthcare and how accountable bureaucracies actually work and proposes that mental healthcare research should not just evaluate new interventions but should investigate new ways of organising This book is written with a non specialist audience in mind as it is intended for all with a stake in mental healthcare research and practice It is also for those with an interest in ethnographic methods as a novel way of deploying ethnography autoethnography and coproduced ethnography to address clinically important research topics Madness, Bureaucracy and Gender in Mumbai, India Annika Strauss,2023-09-15 Regional mental hospitals in India are perceived as colonial artefacts in need of reformation In the last two decades there has been discussion around the maltreatment of patients corruption and poor quality of mental health treatment in these institutions This ethnography scrutinizes the management of madness in one of these asylum like institutions in the context of national change and the global mental health movement The author explores the assembling and impact of psychiatric bureaucratic gendered and queer narratives in and around the hospital Finally the author attempts to reconcile social anthropology and psychiatry by scrutinising their divergent approaches towards mad narratives A Working Life for People with Severe Mental Illness Deborah R. Becker,Robert E. Drake,2003-06-12 Supported employment is a conceptual approach to vocational rehabilitation designed for people with developmental disabilities The Individual Placement and Support IPS method described within utilizes the concept but modifies it for the severely mentally ill Behavioral Sciences Research in Mental Health ,1983 Understanding Psychosis Donald Capps,2010-11-16 When a loved one is struck with psychosis people often misunderstand what is happening and why They may feel helpless or confused or frightened not knowing what to do with or for the sufferer or how to handle the situation themselves This book takes a look at psychosis and how it has been handled over the last century or so Beginning with a definition of psychosis and moving to a consideration of how people who suffer from it were once institutionalized and are now expected to be cared for at home the author traces the challenges families and communities face considers the plight of sufferers and what they experience and offers case examples throughout to illustrate the onset of psychosis the infringement it makes on personal and professional life and the toll it takes on sufferers and caregivers alike Capps covers the magnitude of the problem the treatment of sufferers the warning signs facts and realities of recovery treatments prevention and coping strategies for family members and caregivers Readers will come away from this work with a better understanding of psychosis in the context in which it occurs and what to do for themselves and their loved one as they navigate daily life the mental health system and family dynamics Law & Mental Health Saleem Alam Shah,Bruce Dennis Sales,1991 Metatheory in Social Science Donald Winslow Fiske,Richard A. Shweder,1986-03-15 What is the nature of the social sciences What kinds of knowledge can they and should they hope to create Are objective viewpoints possible and can universal laws be discovered Questions like these have been asked with increasing urgency in recent years as some philosophers and researchers have perceived a crisis in the social sciences Metatheory in Social Science offers many provocative arguments and analyses of basic conceptual frameworks for the study of human behavior These are offered primarily by practicing researchers and are related to problems in disciplines as diverse as sociology psychology psychiatry anthropology and philosophy of science While various points of view are expressed in these nineteen essays they have in common several themes including the comparison of social and natural science the role of knowledge in meeting the demands of society and its pressing problems and the nature and role of subjectivity in science Some authors hold that subjectivity cannot be studied scientifically others argue that it can and must be if progress in knowledge is to be made The essays demonstrate the philosophical pluralism they discuss and give a wide range of alternative positions on the future of the social and behavioral sciences in a postpositivist intellectual world   Family Experiences with Mental Illness Gail Gamache,Richard Tessler,2000-03-30 Tessler and Gamache provide substantial research on the impact of mental illness on the family through interviews conducted with hundreds of family members between 1989 and 1997 According to the authors how families experience the mental illness of a relative depends on many social factors including how public mental health services are organized and financed and whether families feel judged or supported by professionals Most family members experience a range of emotions toward one another ranging from warmth and gratification to anger and rejection Tessler and Gamache detail the family experience with mental illness in terms of both negative and positive feelings They take a holistic approach to the family experience and present a variety of family responses and dilemmas The family members whose stories are told are diverse in respect to race gender age and relationship and the demographic clinical characteristics of their relatives with mental illness Tessler and Gamache find that the amount of burden that family members experience depends in part on which dimension of burden is being addressed When burden is defined as assistance in daily living it is less than what was thought On the other hand the subjective burden associated with supervision and control is substantial Family role and residence contribute to most dimensions of burden For example a mother living with an adult son with schizophrenia will experience mental illness differently than the brother who has moved out of the family home and moved to another state In both studies a major finding involved lower than expected expenditures by family members for medication and mental health treatment in both studies Most expenditures were focused instead on personal or survival needs which for a sub sample of family members involves considerable expenditures This work is an important research finding for scholars students and professionals involved with social work public health and public mental health policy   Qualitative Research in Health Care Immy Holloway,2005-06-16 This book is a comprehensive guide to selecting approaches and carrying out qualitative research Rather than being prescriptive it provides information on various data collection procedures and how to make decisions about specific qualitative approaches Its aim is to extend researchers understanding of the participants in research be they patients peers or students and to improve clinical practice on the basis of evidence from qualitative studies Each chapter is illustrated with examples of research projects Topics discussed include The nature of qualitative research The selection of a specific qualitative research approach The collection and analysis of qualitative data Writing up qualitative research Written
