

Principle	Description
Build love maps	A love map is a deep understanding of your partner. This means knowing about their likes and dislikes, their past, their hopes, and other important details.
Share fondness and admiration	We all love compliments and feeling appreciated. This principle helps couples learn to regularly vocalize what they appreciate about one another.
Turn towards instead of away	When either partner needs attention or support, it's important to turn toward them rather than away. Turning away or against a partner while they're struggling can worsen conflict.
The positive perspective	One or both partners can sometimes get stuck in a pattern of seeing everything through a negative lens. This principle helps couples begin to give each other the benefit of the doubt and try to remember they're on the same team.
Manage conflict	Even healthy relationships have conflict, but knowing how to manage it is what separates them from unhealthy relationships. Not only does this teach couples how to manage conflict better, but you'll also learn to self-soothe to remain calm rather than making things worse.
Make life dreams come true	Remember, you're on the same team. As a team, you're each other's biggest cheerleader and can learn how to be there for one another to achieve both of your dreams.
Create shared meaning	Similar to the love maps, this is about understanding your inner world as a couple. You'll discover things you can do together that you both love and unique ways to surprise each other.
