Principles Of Olfactory Maturation In Vertebrates:

Ontogeny of Olfaction Raimund Apfelbach, Winrich Breipohl, 2012-12-06 The impacts of specifically experienced external and internal environments upon phylogenetically established pathways of ontogenetic development seem to be responsible for the intra species variation of organisms Therefore normal function as well as disorders of sensory systems can often be better understood by considering the principles of ontogenetic maturation and the time schedule of environmental influences during that period Sensory organs and systems have long been considered to be hereditarily determined for their analysis of the environment However it is becoming more and more clear that their specificity depends also upon the sequence and nature of environmental impacts impacts during highly sensitive periods of postnatal life being most effective The present book using an interdisciplinary approach has brought together various descriptions of developmental processes for one of the phylogenetically oldest sensory analytical circuits the olfactory system Although investigations of a wide range of vertebrates are included from marsupials to man the main attention was given to rodents the most frequently used experimental animal in this field of research Authors have been asked for reviews and original considerations on the rationales of developmental principles in the olfactory system and wherever appropriate to highlight its uniqueness or similarities with other parts of the nervous system Authors were also asked to consider future needs of research in their fields to describe their own approaches in this context and to outline general horizons of neurodevelopmental research Chemoreception Abstracts, 1988

Janssens, 2012-12-06 Marsupials are excellent objects for studies on developmental processes in all mammals including humans Marsupials are very immature at birth and undergo most of their development in a pouch where they can be manipulated in a variety of ways without affecting the mother Most of these studies are on systems which largely mature before birth in eutherian mammals and are consequently difficult to investigate Attention is also drawn to certain features peculiar to adult marsupials e.g. they continue to grow throughout adult life valuable for studies on growth mechanisms and furthermore the composition of marsupial milk changes radically through lactation most important in studies of hormonal regulation of milk composition and secretion Current Catalog National Library of Medicine (U.S.), First multi year cumulation covers six years 1965-70 Tasting and Smelling Gary K.
