

1.2.5. Safety and Security (Principles of Crime Prevention through Environmental Design)

A. Background

The design of buildings and public spaces has an impact on perceptions of safety and security, as well as actual opportunities for crime. When development is appropriately designed, it can reduce the likelihood of crimes being committed.

There are four main principles of CPTED— natural surveillance, access control, territorial reinforcement and space management. Incorporating these four principles of CPTED can help to create a safe and secure environment that encourages activity, vitality and viability, enabling a greater level of security. They can also assist in minimising the incidence of crime and contribute to perceptions of increased public safety.

Applicants should use this section as a tool in the design of developments. However, not all measures outlined below will be relevant for all types of development. For dwelling houses and dual occupancy developments, the CPTED principles may be delivered by simple measures such as:

- Installing a peephole in the front door;
- Locating a window of a living area to face the street; and
- Maintaining the property, particularly the landscaping.

B. Referrals and Required Information

Council is committed to ensuring that developments reduce the potential for crime. As such, Council has developed and entered into a protocol with the NSW Police Service which stipulates what type of developments will be referred to the Police and associated timeframes for response. The following developments will generally be referred to the Police:

- Multi dwelling housing and residential flat buildings, where there are more than 15 dwellings.
- Mixed use developments that include 15 or more dwellings.
- Major new or upgrading of commercial premises (business, office or retail premises).
- New industrial complexes with or without multiple industrial units comprising 1,000m<sup>2</sup> or more in floor space.
- New educational establishments or significant upgrading of existing educational establishments.
- New railway stations or significant upgrading of existing railway stations.
- Large recreational facilities and community facilities such as community centres.
- Large child care centres.
- New registered clubs or pubs including applications for extended hours of operation, gaming rooms and nightclubs.
- Highway service centres, service stations and some food and drink premises including drive through restaurants.
- New health services facilities and residential care facilities, including hospitals, nursing homes and medical centres and larger upgrades to these facilities.
- Unusual developments such as brothels and amusement centres.
