Computational pool is a relatively recent entrant into the group of games played by computer agents It features a novel combination of properties that distinguish it from other such games including continuous action and state spaces uncertainty in execution a unique turn taking structure and of course an adversarial nature This combination leads to new challenges both in modeling and reasoning about the game and in designing agents for effective play We address the modeling challenges by presenting a model of generalized billiards games and showing that an equilibrium exists within this model To address the practical challenges of designing an agent we discuss CueCard our agent which won the 2008 computational pool tournament with a special focus on which new advancements made this agent successful The second portion of the dissertation focuses on a topic inspired by the computational pool domain that of execution skill In many AI settings an agent is comprised of both action planning and action execution components We first present experimental work in which we examine the relationship between the precision of the execution component the intelligence of the planning component and the overall success of the agent within our computational pool framework Our motivation lies in determining whether higher execution skill rewards more strategic playing Finally we present a method for modeling imperfect execution skill in normal form games and examine the effect that changing execution skill levels can have in these games We then study games in which players have imperfect execution skill and one player's true skill is not common knowledge In these settings the possibility arises of a player hustling or pretending to have lower execution skill than they actually have Focusing on repeated zero sum games we provide a hustle proof strategy this strategy guarantees a player the same payoff without knowledge of the opponents execution skill level as they could guarantee with knowledge of the opponent's true execution skill level

The First Part of the Institutes of the Laws of England: Or, A Commentary Upon Littleton, Not the Name of the Author Only, But of the Law it Self ... Sir Edward Coke,1719 The Payment Order of Antiquity and the Middle Ages Benjamin Geva,2011-11-01 Examining the legal history of the order to pay money initiating a funds transfer the author tracks basic principles of modern law to those that governed the payment order of Antiquity and the Middle Ages Exploring the legal nature of the payment order and its underpinning in light of contemporary institutions and payment mechanisms the book traces the evolution of money payment mechanisms and the law that governs them from developments in Ancient Mesopotamia Ancient Greece Rome and Greco Roman Egypt through medieval Europe and post medieval England Doctrine is examined in Jewish Islamic Roman common and civil laws Investigating such diverse legal systems and doctrines at the intersection of laws governing bank deposits obligations the assignment of debts and negotiable instruments the author identifies the common denominator for the evolving legal principles and speculates on possible reciprocity At the same time he challenges the idea of law merchant as a mercantile creation The book provides an account of the evolution of payment law as a distinct cohesive body of legal doctrine applicable to funds transfers It shows how principles of law developed in tandem with the evolution of banking and in response to changing circumstances and proposes a redefinition of law merchant The author points to deposit banking and emerging technologies as embodying a great potential for future non cash payment system growth However he recommends caution in predicting both the future of deposit banking and the overall impact of technology At the same time he expresses confidence in the durability of legal doctrine to continue to evolve and accommodate future payment system developments
