

Libraries Then and Now

Then

- Internet was new
- E-mail was new
- Libraries was print-based (with some CD-ROMs, disks)

Now

- Internet is baked-in to our services
- E-mail is old, almost obsolete
- Library is largely electronic; print is a small part of what users need.

Always

- Library mission is split between meeting the needs of internal users and serving public requests.
- It is hard to get the potential user base engaged, trained, and aware of library services.
- Making the business case for libraries hinges on what the decision-makers value.
