Sectoral Composition And The Effect Of Education On Wages An International Comparison:

Sectoral Composition and the Effect of Education on Wages Jim Allen, 1997-01-01 It is a widely held conviction that in order to earn a decent living one needs a good education. However, the importance of education as a determinant of earnings is far from constant; it differs strongly between countries and also between industrial sectors within countries. Little progress has been made towards explaining these differences, partly due to the small number of cases available to test explanations. This study tackles this problem by pooling employee data from 11 capitalist countries and focussing on differences in the sectoral context of wage determination. Depending on this context, employers may differ in their vulnerability to the effects of poor employee performance. Could sectoral differences in the impact of education be understood in terms of strategies used by especially vulnerable employers to safeguard the quality of worker performance? And might differences between countries then result at least in part from substantial differences in the distribution of the relevant context characteristics? These questions are analysed using a multi-level research design in which the impact of sectoral context variables on the education wage relation at both the sector and country levels is examined.

Growth With Inequality: An International Comparison On Income Distribution Jinjun Xue, 2012-07-13 In the era of globalization and liberalization, the world is enjoying high growth as well as suffering from the ill effects of unequal distribution of its economic outcomes. The activities of anti-government demonstrations in China and across the world via the Occupy Wall Street Movement highlight that inequality has become an international phenomenon. It is apparent in both poor countries under authoritarianism and rich countries governed by a democratic regime. Thus, inequality has become not only a hurdle to development but also a threat to social and political stability. The spread of the Jasmine Revolution across parts of North Africa and the Arab Spring are illustrative of what can happen under certain circumstances. This book confirms the inconsistencies between high growth and increasing inequality via a series of case studies across 11 countries, numerous regions, and OECD members. Many of the case studies draw upon original household surveys. Our findings indicate the seriousness of income inequality, explore factors that have caused the inequality, and analyze their economic and social consequences. The book raises and deals with three key questions: 1. Can high growth reduce inequality gradually? 2. Can government intervention be effective in equalizing income distribution? 3. Is the income disparity an engine for or an obstacle to high growth?

Differences and Changes in Wage Structures Richard B. Freeman, Lawrence F. Katz, 2007-12-01 During the past two decades, wages of skilled workers in the United States rose, while those of unskilled workers fell. Less educated young men in particular have suffered unprecedented losses in real earnings These twelve original essays explore whether this trend is unique to the United States or is part of a general growth in inequality in advanced countries Focusing on labor market institutions and the supply and demand forces that affect wages the papers compare patterns of earnings inequality and pay differentials in the United States Australia Korea Japan Western Europe and the changing economies of Eastern Europe Cross country studies examine issues such as managerial compensation gender differences in earnings and the relationship of pay to regional unemployment From this rich store of data the contributors attribute changes in relative wages and unemployment among countries both to differences in labor market institutions and training and education systems and to long term shifts in supply and demand for skilled workers These shifts are driven in part by skill biased technological change and the growing internationalization of advanced industrial economies Annual Report Rijksuniversiteit Limburg. Researchcentrum voor Onderwijs en Arbeidsmarkt,1999 Is Fiscal Policy the Answer? Blanca Moreno-Dodson,2012-11-15 The effects of fiscal policy measures both taxes and public spending adopted by developing countries in response to the 2009 global crisis are still uncertain This book discusses them using an analytical framework that allows for distilling possible implications on growth and social welfare OECD Economic Surveys: Sweden 1997 OECD,1996-12-30 This 1997 edition of OECD s periodic review of Sweden s economy includes chapters covering economic trends and prospects monetary and fiscal policy implementing the OECD Jobs Strategy and policies for the business sector Socioeconomic Causes and Consequences of Divorce Anne-Rigt Poortman,2002 The present study examines the socio economic causes and consequences of divorce in the Netherlands during the second half of the twentieth century Are women with a better labour market position at a higher risk of divorce and are men who are unemployed or have an unstable career more likely to divorce The study also seeks to explain the influence of spouses socio economic positions on divorce In addition it takes into account the changes surrounding women s work and the changing sex roles Met een Nederlandse samenvatting

Catching Up? sector World Health Organization, International Labour Organization, 2022-07-13      The Labor Market Effects of Foreign-owned Firms Rita Almeida, 2004      Economic reform in developing countries Lyn Squire, José María Fanelli, 2008

This book offers insights into the process of economic reform in developing countries. It is organized around three factors that are critical to the success of any reform. According to Nobel Laureate Amartya Sen, these key dimensions are Reach, Range, and Reason. Reach refers to the ability of reform to be person centered and evenhanded, reaching all individuals in society. Range considers the institutional reforms and policy changes necessary to implement change and the possible ripple effects on other policies and populations. Finally, Reason captures the importance of constantly asking why a particular reform has been selected.

Resources in Education, 1997-04      Unemployment and the Earnings Structure in Latvia Mihails Hazans, 2005

Latvia has recorded sustained GDP and productivity growth since 1997. Yet unemployment rates, despite gradual decrease, have remained high. Hazans explores the mysteries of unemployment in Latvia. He analyzes labor flows between employment, unemployment, and nonparticipation and finds the following results: The type of education and the region of residence appear to be the most important determinants of success in finding jobs by the unemployed. The unemployed from ethnic minorities have lower chances to find a job within a year, other things equal, while the difference between genders is not significant. However, neither ethnicity nor gender seems to matter as far as the transition from employment to unemployment is concerned. Regional disparities in job destruction seem to be less sizable than disparities in job creation. The analysis of job search methods by the unemployed indicates that two target groups of state employment policy, young unemployed and long term unemployed, appear to make relatively little use of the public employment service. The author also looks at the impact of education, age, gender, ethnicity, and regional factors on individual earnings. The relative position of youth and women in the Latvian labor market compared with prime age men is less unfavorable than in many other countries. Yet the gender wage gap has increased recently, and the same is true for regional disparities. Beneficiaries of the so called new education system have a relatively high market value, especially with graduates from universities and general secondary schools. Finally, returns to experience seem to be nonexistent for many adult workers without higher education. This paper is a product of the Poverty Reduction and Economic Management Division, Europe and Central Asia Region, and is part of a larger effort in the region to understand labor market dynamics.

Abstract      Training and the Private Sector Lisa M. Lynch, 2007-12-01

How can today's workforce keep pace with an increasingly competitive global economy? As new technologies rapidly transform the workplace, employee requirements are changing, and workers must adapt to different working conditions. This volume compares new evidence on the returns from worker training in the United States, Germany, France, Britain, Japan, Norway, and the Netherlands. The authors focus on Germany's widespread formal apprenticeship programs, the U.S. system of learning by doing, Japan's low employee turnover and extensive company training, and Britain's government led and school based training schemes. The evidence shows that overall training in the workplace is more effective than training in schools Moreover even when U S firms spend as much on training as other countries do their employees may still be less skilled than workers in Europe or Japan Training and the Private Sector points to training programs in Germany Japan and other developed countries as models for creating a workforce in the United States that can compete more successfully in today s economy
